INVESTMENT WITH POSITIVE RETURN.
No financial securities yet offered in this market have become so readily and generally popular as the First Mortgage Premium Bonds of the Industrial Exhibition Company of New York; and there exists many potent reasons for this marked preference. In the first place, the bonds are placed at the attainable price of $20 each, and the return of the principal is assured beyond contingency.
Further, the holder of each bond participates in the premium drawing, through which the opportunity is afforded of drawing a prize of from $100,000 downward, and thus securing a competency; these drawings taking place regularly every three months until the whole of the bonds are redeemed. Still further, the enterprise has been solely undertaken for the purpose of aiding in the erection of the magnificent edifices to be used for a perpetual Industrial Exposition on the valuable grounds of the company, which includes all the land between Ninety-eighth and 102d streets and Third and Fourth avenues, New York city, the project being a highly useful and important one, which especially appeals to the patriotism of New Yorkers. Again, the plan on which these bonds are issued is under the authority of a special act passed by the Legislature of New York, which immediately received the indorsement and approval of that capable and conservative Executive, General John A. Dix. And yet again, the conducture of this enterprise is under the immediate management of some of our best known and most reputable citizens; men of unblemished integrity, who have long enjoyed the highest confidence of all classes, and who are known to be just such persons as should fill the positions here required of them.
Although new in this country, premium bonds of this description have long been used in Europe; and at the present time the principal loans of Prussia, Austria, Russia, Bavaria, Baden, Sweden, Holland, Belgium, Turkey, as well as those of most of the municipalities, have been raised in this popular manner; the bonds serving the people of these countries as a sphere similar to that occupied by the savings banks in this country.
It has been predicted that this form of loan will yet be extensively adopted, if not by the general, by the State and local governments here. And there seems to be abundant grounds for such surmises, as it will soon be found that the majority of persons will prefer this form of investment, as the principal must come back, and there is always a chance for a fortune, especially as they will see that their money could not be placed in safer keeping. In fact, we will soon arrive at the European status, where the bonds are often sold at double or thrice their original cost a day or two before the premiums are drawn. Full details of the plans of drawing, as well as the bonds, can be procured of Messrs. MORGENTHAU, BRUNO & CO., Financial Agents, No. 23 Park row, New York city.

DUBLIN, July 13, 1874.

While on the voyage from New York to Queenstown, an American gentleman, a member of the legal profession, was discussing with me the present condition of Ireland. We were talking about the Act of Union of 1800, which united the Parliament of Ireland with that of England, and the disastrous consequences which followed to the trade and commerce of Dublin, where, during the setting of the Legislature the nobility and gentry resided, for seven or eight months of each year, in their capacity of representatives of the people, and spent their money freely among all classes of the citizens. Said this American gentleman, "When the act of union was accomplished it cut the head off Ireland and destroyed her capital. It took the wealth of the nation away to England and crippled all those trades that derived vitality and prosperity from the expenditure caused by the residence of a native aristocracy in Dublin." Your correspondent replied to these remarks by saying that every person who had even the slightest information about Ireland and the Irish metropolis was now aware of the fact that the once splendid houses of Dublin, formerly the homes of men of fortune and position, have gone to decay or have been converted into hospitals, houses of refuge, stores or public institutions. Tyrone House, formerly the residence of the Marquis of Waterford, is now used as the offices of the National Board of Education. Moira House, on Ussher's Quay, once the beautiful residence of Lord Moira, has been long a mendicity institution. The palace of the Earl of Powerscourt, in William street, has been converted into a dry goods shop. The house of Lord Belvedere has been for several years a schoolhouse. The elegant residence of the Earl of Charlemont, in Rutland square, where Grattan and the other leaders of the Irish Parliament often met, is now a government office, I believe. The house in Ely place in which Lord Clare, the active and unscrupulous supporter of the Union, lived, is in the last stage of decay, almost as much forgotten as the proud and overbearing man who once owned it. The noble mansion of the Duke of Leinster, in Kildare street, has been for several years used for the purposes of the Royal Dublin Society; other houses, once gay with fashion and made remarkable by the reunions of an intellectual and refined society, have been deserted by their occupants and are now fast going to ruin, or let in tenements, where poverty tries hard to disguise its painful features. In place of this elegant society and those handsome mansions in which this society disported itself, what have we? A society of doctors and barristers, who make it almost an especial study to procure "invitations" to the levées and balls at the Castle, where a lord lieutenant performs the part of and sees many a one who has been pestering him for place and pension under the government of Great Britain. In lieu of a native aristocracy in Dublin there is a crowd of doctors and barristers without practice. There are so many doctors residing in Merrion square that one side of it has been facetiously termed "Pill Box Row." Briefless barristers torture the government for situations, and are sometimes saved from almost certain starvation by convenient appointments. It is a fact universally admitted here that the independence of the Irish Bar, once the glory and the pride of the country, is gone. With a very few exceptions no voice is now heard from that Bar pleading the cause of Ireland. The reverse was the case in the days of Curran. In those days the Bar of Ireland was independent; to-day it is, to a great extent, corrupt, and it is most certainly enslaved. A barrister who is expecting a place from the government dare not say a single word in favor of home rule; dare not attend a meeting for any object whatever, unless that object be approved by the government. If he spoke in support of any matters not sanctioned by the powers that be, if he uttered a word favorable to the sitting up of a parliament in Dublin, he would be tabooed from the society of the Castle, and, in that case, his chance of obtaining an appointment would be about as great as his chance of making milestones dance by whistling jigs to them. This is a sad case.

FASHIONABLE SOCIETY

here is made up, for the most part, of persons that are favorable to the connection of Ireland with England, and who very largely depend upon government employ for their income. There are, of course, exceptions to this. There are retired merchants and country gentlemen who want no appointments from the Crown, and are quite content to live in ease on the wealth they have acquired by honest industry in trade and farming. One of the great difficulties in Ireland is that people are very rich or very poor, and there is a foolish, almost disgusting, pride among a portion of the population—the sons of men who have money—that makes them "walking gentlemen" instead of workers or earners at some useful calling. This kind of thing is hurting the country considerably, and is an evil that has remained long unchecked. If you ask a Dubliner, "Is Ireland progressing in improvement or is it not?" "Is the trade of Dublin better than it was twenty years ago?" you may be certain you will get different answers to those questions. One will say, "Look at the buildings that have been put up and are now being put up." Another will observe, "Wages have advanced; laborers and skilled mechanics are better paid than they have ever been; and as for farmers, they are rolling in money, getting, as they do, enormous prices for their cattle." This may be all true; but it would seem that there is not a general diffusion of wealth throughout the country. A cry comes up from Connemara that the people there are in a sad state of distress. But it must be remembered that the soil of Connemara is very barren, exposed, as it is, to the fierce and terrible blasts of the Atlantic Ocean, which ocean washes the whole range of the western coast of Ireland. There is distress in every country, and there is distress here; to how great an extent it exists is a question that your correspondent will not at present discuss.

THE SITUATION AS IT WAS.

In 1798, the year of the insurrection and three years anterior to the period of the Union, Lord Clare, speaking in the Irish Parliament, said:—"There is not a nation on the face of the habitable globe which has advanced in cultivation, in agriculture and in manufactures with the same rapidity as Ireland."

At the time these words were uttered the Parliament was sitting in Dublin, and the Irish nobility and gentry were living at home and spending their fortunes among their own people. What are they doing now? Many of them are absentees who draw their rents from oppressed tenants and spend them in England or on the Continent.

AS IT IS AFTER THE UNION.

The union has been in existence for seventy-three years. What is the condition of Ireland to-day? In 1832 the Rev. Charles Boyton, a clergyman of the Anglican Church, delivered a speech at a meeting of the Protestant Conservative Society of Ireland. He compared the number of sheep sold at the fair of Ballinasloe with the number sold and exported in the year in which he was speaking. He took the number sold in each year as a test of the number of sheep in the county, and he took the number exported as showing that the rest were sold at home. On the 18th of November, 1873, at the first day's meeting of the Home Rule Conference, Mr. Butt, alluding to this speech of Mr. Boyton's, said:—

I will compare the number of sheep sold at the great fair at Ballinasloe and the number exported in the years 1799 and 1870. I take the numbers for 1799 from Mr. Boyton's speech; those for 1870 from that invaluable repertory of Irish statistics, the Almanac of Mr. Thorn. Here are the numbers:—

Sheep sold at Ballinasloe for 1799	7,700
Sheep sold at Ballinasloe for 1870	71,910
Sheep exported from Ireland for 1799	806
Sheep exported from Ireland for 1870	620,834

Taking the same statistics as to horned cattle, they stand thus:—

Horned cattle sold at Ballinasloe for 1799	9,900
Horned cattle sold at Ballinasloe for 1870	13,674
Horned cattle exported to England for 1799	14,000
Horned cattle exported to England for 1870	415,673

Now, sir, if M. Boyton was right in supposing that the rise or fall in the number of sheep or cattle sold at the great fair of Ballinasloe to be a fair comparative test of the numbers reared in the country—and I believe every gentleman acquainted with country affairs will agree that this is so—then, sir, the inference is irresistible. In 1799 Ireland reared more sheep than she does now; and very nearly as many horned cattle. But in 1799 there was scarcely any appreciable exportation—now there is an enormous one. What became of the sheep and cattle, in other words, of the beef and mutton of 1799? What becomes of it now? Before the union there was a market at home. There was an Irish population eating meat and paying for it. Now, with an increased population, there is no consumption for it at home. Observe the production is not increased—the market only is changed. Before the union it was an Irish one, it is now an English one.

LORD ROSSE'S EXPERIENCE.

The late Lord Rosse, in a pamphlet on the land question, made use of these words:—"I well recollect the glowing terms in which several old people were wont to speak of the plenty in their younger days; bread and meat and the best ale being the ordinary peasant's fare."

BRITISH GOLD AND IRISH CLASS INTERESTS.

Nearly all the cattle raised in Ireland now are exported to England. To be sure John Bull, who is a good customer for solid food and loves to enjoy it, pays well for it; but the gold that he foots up his butcher's bill with, though it makes its way back to Ireland, finds its way out of it again in the shape of rents paid to great absentee lords, who regard the attractions of England and the glitter and glare of Paris as more agreeable to them than the beauties of Killarney, or the charming scenery of Wicklow. Long ago William Smith O'Brien, in the English Parliament, sought to impose a tax on the Irish absentees; but that Parliament "could not see it;" it had not the will or the wish to make Irishmen pay a tax for spending their money in and enriching England. This thing might go on till Doomsday before the Parliament of England interfered to stop it.

THE HOME RULERS' CASE AND ARGUMENT.

The home rulers contend that in every social department of Ireland there is depression and deterioration, and, judging from the facts and figures relied on by Mr. Butt, this position would seem to be made out. The other side of the question is taken up by the supporters of the English interest. But any one travelling in remote and distant parts of the country, as well as in the liberties of Dublin, cannot fail to notice the mean, poor dress of the common people; while, if one were to draw his impressions of the actual condition of things from the appearance of the "heavy swells" and richly dressed ladies promenading in Grafton street and Sackville street, he would be inclined to judge that all was gay and lovely, and that Ireland is now one of the richest countries in Europe. As your correspondent has already observed, there is a certain class here too proud to work and too poor to be of any use, depending, as they do, upon small stipends from rich friends and relatives. This foolish pride must be broken down. Real prosperity would come from men of means investing their money in trade and commerce, thus giving a chance to those around them of ceasing to be burdens upon society and of finally becoming self-supporting and truly independent. If young Irishmen of fortune would forget that their forefathers had kings and princes for their relatives and adopt a little of the democratic spirit so apparent in the character of the American people, and invest their means for the employment of the hundreds of idle hands around them, they would be doing an incalculable good, resulting in the production of self-reliance in a population too long kept down under the frowns and oppressions of titled lords, "the tenth transmitters of foolish faces." It does not necessarily follow that because a man has a title he is bad; but if he has a title and does good, gives employment to idle hands and takes an important share in the work, he certainly has a claim to some extra applause for thus breaking through the prejudices of caste.

THE HOME RULE LEAGUE.

The Home Rule League held an important meeting in the Round Room of the Rotunda on Saturday night, July 11. Your correspondent was present, for the purpose of informing the readers of the HERALD as to what sort of thing a meeting of the Home Rule League in Dublin is. In the early part of the week, when calling at the offices of the League in Sackville street, to see Mr. John Martin, M. P. for Meath, to whom I had been for the second time introduced in New York some few years since, information was given me that Mr. Martin was in London, attending to his Parliamentary duties. However, Mr. McAllister, the Assistant Secretary, received me with the greatest courtesy, and subsequently sent me a ticket for admission to the meeting of the League on Saturday. On the afternoon of that day, when your correspondent again called at the offices of the League he was informed that Mr. Martin had not yet returned from London, but Mr. McAllister kindly supplied him with all the public documents upon which the League relies as expositions of its principles. While I was engaged in conversation with Mr. McAllister Mr. Alexander M. Sullivan, one of the Parliamentary representatives of the county of Louth, entered the room, and, at once recognizing me, greeted me warmly, and said that any information it was in his power to give regarding the home rule movement in Ireland he would willingly supply to the representative of the HERALD.

MR. SULLIVAN,

the talented editor of the Dublin Nation, stated that he intends to pay a visit to America during the approaching fall on personal business, and it is not improbable that his voice may be heard in New York and other cities of the Union, rousing the Irish population to action in favor of home rule.

It would also seem, from certain observations dropped by Judge Little at the meeting on Saturday night, that all the probabilities are in favor of going to America after Parliament has adjourned for the purpose of addressing the Irish there on the right of Ireland to self-government. Without doubt Mr. Butt is the ablest orator that has appeared in Ireland since the days of O'Connell, and he certainly is as great a lawyer. If he goes to the United States and makes public addresses on the great question that now agitates Ireland there will be presented an opportunity of hearing a man unequalled in these days for his brilliancy and genius at the Irish bar and in the debates in Parliament.

To return to

THE MEETING AT THE ROTUNDA.

The Round Room was full of people. The galleries were occupied to their entire extent, and the platform was thronged. When Mr. Butt made his appearance the whole audience, composed of at least 2,500 persons, rose as if by electricity and cheered him for some minutes. He bowed his acknowledgments, his eyes, which are of peculiar and remarkable brilliancy, sparkling all the while. He then took his seat. After which Mr. Charles S. Parnell, High Sheriff of the county of Wicklow, a young gentleman of fortune and a relative of Sir John Parnell, who had been Chancellor of the Exchequer at the time of the Irish Parliament, was moved to the chair amid a loud burst of applause. Mr. Parnell is a Protestant, and has taken an active part with his Catholic countrymen in support of home rule. He is somewhat nervous when he at first begins to speak, but as he goes on his nervousness disappears. He warms up to his subject and utters his thoughts in exceedingly well chosen language. His personal appearance is prepossessing, even handsome. He is evidently a man of culture and refinement. Mr. Sullivan, M. P.; Mr. Meldon, M. P.; Mr. C. J. Fay, M. P., and Dr. O'Leary, M. P., on presenting themselves on the platform, were cheered vehemently. Several new members were admitted, including thirty-two from Canada.

JUDGE LITTLE,

in speaking to a resolution for the admission of members, suggested that the League ought to send Mr. Butt to America to address the Irish, and counteract the assertions and statements of Mr. Froude, and evoke an expression of opinion from Irishmen and Americans favorable to home rule. This suggestion was heartily acquiesced in by the meeting.

MR. BUTT

then made the speech of the evening, reviewing the recent debate in the House of Commons on home rule, and declaring that, at the present moment, Ireland had not a constitutional government. He instanced this by reference to the coercion laws, observing that he had on that day, while travelling in the railroad train, met an American gentleman, who remarked that there were a great many crows in the field. "Yes," said Mr. Butt; "but the farmers cannot shoot them, because, under the law, they are not allowed to keep guns, except upon license from a magistrate, and no man of spirit would care to keep arms on sufferance." He showed up the venomous and oppressive character of these coercive laws, which aim deadly blows at the liberty of the press, the liberty of the subject, and the liberty of any editor who dares to comment, in fearless style, upon the action of the government and the executive, and he asserted, in regard to those measures, that if they existed in England they would in all probability produce a rebellion. After declaring that the vote in the House of Commons indisputably demonstrated the fact that a majority of the Irish members were in favor of a Parliament in Dublin, Mr. Butt quoted the words of Plunkett, addressed to the Irish Parliament:—"Yourselves you may extinguish, but Parliament you cannot extinguish. It is enshrined in the hearts of the people; it is enthroned in the sanctuary of the constitution; it is as immortal as the land it protects; as well might the frantic suicide hope that the act which destroys his miserable body will extinguish his immortal soul." The quotation of these words brought down the House. The honorable member for Limerick closed his brilliant speech with a peroration in which he expressed his hope and belief that they would again have their Irish Parliament, representing the Irish nation—incorruptible, honorable and immortal. He sat down amid a storm of cheers and waving of hats and handkerchiefs.

W. A. M. SULLIVAN, M. P.,

who was very enthusiastically received, was the next speaker, and a very able and effective one he is. He gave Mr. Butt great praise for the manner in which he has led the Irish party in the House of Commons. He argued that it was a great point gained when the English Parliament gave up time to discuss home rule with the Irish members, fifty-nine of whom now constituted the only Irish party that had ever existed in the British Legislature since the Union.

DR. O'LEARY, M. P.,

for the borough of Drogheda, followed Mr. Sullivan. He is a stout, low-sized man, and, while addressing the audience, kept moving himself about not in the most graceful manner possible. He, as a Catholic, repelled the idea thrown out by the Chief Secretary for Ireland, Sir M. H. Beach, during the late debate on home rule, that if there was a Parliament in Dublin the Catholics would fly at the throats of Protestants, and expressed a hope that the approaching 12th of July would be the signal for universal toleration and Christian forbearance throughout the length and breadth of the land.

MR. FAY, M. P. FOR CAVAN, argued that a clear majority of the Protestants of Ulster, counting Presbyterians and Dissenters, was in favor of home rule.

MR. J. G. SWIFT M'NEILL,

in proposing a vote of thanks to the chairman, Mr. Parnell, made an important remark. He said he was a Protestant, and that he would be quite willing to entrust the liberties of the Protestants of his country to a Parliament of Irish Catholics. This sentiment was loudly applauded. Mr. McNeill added that he believed the misfortunes of Ireland arose from the interference of England in its affairs.

CITIZEN GREETINGS TO THE LEADER.

When Mr. Butt was leaving the meeting, at half-past ten o'clock, I was close behind him. The people cheered for him again and again, and I saw persons taking him by the hand, and placing their hands on his back and shoulders in testimony of affectionate regard. From what I observed I would say that he is undoubtedly the most popular man to-day in this country, as he is assuredly the ablest representative from Ireland in the English Parliament.

POOR CHILDREN'S PICNIC.

Excursion of the Eleventh Ward Juveniles to Oriental Grove.

More and more popular grow the children's free excursions. That from the Eleventh ward yesterday was in many features the crowning success of the season. Almost from sunrise the neighborhood of the police station at Union Market, Houston street and avenue D, was brightened by the presence of hundreds of pretty children, in their best clothes, ready for a day of fun and frolic. At eight o'clock the procession was formed, numbering close upon twenty-five hundred as happy faces as ever a summer's sun shone on. Preceded by the Governor's Island Band the gay company moved under charge of the police toward the pier at the foot of East Fifth street, where the barge Chicago lay awaiting its freightage of delighted children. As they marched to merry strains they carried proudly the bright gay flags and banners presented to the association by a generous and charitable lady, and were greeted at every step by a great concourse of proud and thankful mothers, glad to see their little ones enjoying a pleasure provided by the thoughtful liberality of those whose own children are not doomed to breathe heaven's summer air in the densely thronged tenement houses or in the close and narrow streets. By nine o'clock the barge was loaded. As the line approached the gangplank Colonel Williams and the policemen under his direction rejected from the ranks all whose size showed them to be over thirteen years of age. By this culling process a large company was left on the wharf when the boat was full, perhaps two hundred. Some of these were big boys from other wards, who, obtaining tickets, had calculated on a day memorable for free ice cream and other delicacies, such as are furnished for the benefit of smaller and better children.

TWO THOUSAND BABIES AFLOAT.

After each child stepped on the boat, he or she was handed a ticket for the refreshments. On counting these it was found that the excursion carried 2,113 youngsters, of whom about one thousand five hundred were under nine years of age, many of them just barely able to walk alone. A noticeable proportion of these laughing babies were evidently of Jewish origin. German was the mother tongue of the general mass. A handsomer collection of that number of children was never seen together. Hundreds of them were positively beautiful in form and feature, while hearty enjoyment lent a pleased sparkle to all eyes and wreathed every lip with grateful smiles. The boys went upon the upper deck, while the girls remained below, the band playing first for the one and then for the other company who in turn danced, marched or sung gleefully as the barge glided swiftly up the East River and the Sound. At every point the company was hailed from passing steamers and boats and from the shore, while waving flags and handkerchiefs caught the eye at almost every moment.

THE TREAT.

Soon after the start each boy and girl received a substantial lunch of fresh rolls and milk. Sandwiches were plentifully served to each going off the boat at the grove, which was reached at eleven o'clock, after a most delightful sail through the charming scenery of the East River and Sound. On the return ice cream and cake of the best quality were distributed to every boy and girl, who were bountifully served, though their numbers proved larger than had been expected. Lemonade by the barrelful was also provided. No child of the two thousand failed to receive a full share of all these substantials and dainties, and all were satisfied with the bountiful treat provided for them.

WOODS AND WATERS.

It was a long, bright stream of happy childhood which crossed the wooden pier at Ocean Grove from the deck of the Chicago. Long before the last of the line had reached the shade the first, having disposed of their sandwiches and piled their clothing on the bank, were disporting in the blue waters of the Sound, on the pebbly beach which fronts the grove, at one of the prettiest points of Long Island. Boys, going a little on the right, soon appeared amphibious, many of them swimming like ducks and diving like frogs from rocks and pier timbers. The girls went a little further to the left, and soon found themselves, if not so familiar with the brine, as appreciative of its charms. For once they had a chance to tumble in the flood, safely and to their hearts' content. Many, not caring or daring to sport in the waves, were soon roaming about under the deep shade of the oaks, hickories, elms and cedars, breaking boughs and culling flowers as trophies. No dampness made the woods disagreeable and the city children, whose lives are in close, dusty streets, fairly revelled in the grove. Meanwhile Mr. Punch collected a delighted crowd in the pavilion, under the trees, where they laughed and shouted with childish energy of joy. More than three hours, crammed with strange, sweet pleasures, were passed thus in the woods and waters at Oriental Grove.

HOMEWARD IN A SHOWER.

Sooner than it would otherwise have done sounded the steam whistle for the return. This because a shower cloud lowered. After all were safe on board and the barge on her way home the fierce, heavy shower struck the excursion. It rained most of the way home, but this interfered only slightly with the merry party. Their dance or march went on the same; equally they enjoyed the good things placed before them, and none the less they remembered with charmed gladness the bright pleasure day they had passed. They came to the Third street wharf at five o'clock, where many were met in the shower by mothers and sisters awaiting their return. As they ran, shouting and laughing, homewards, swinging their green boughs or waving their floral treasures, they wore faces as bright and glad as though no rain had been falling. They left the boat with smiling adieus to Colonel Williams and the officers, whose care had been exercised all day for their comfort, and blessing the charity which had instituted and sustained this admirable arrangement whereby the poor children of the city enjoy a small share of open air pleasure in these long summer days.

THE COST.

By the bills in Colonel Williams' hands it appears this excursion cost $674 22. This sum divided by 2,113, the number of children carried, will show the cost of a day of absolute happiness to these little ones to have been but about thirty-two cents. What other investment can show such ample returns?

WOMAN AND HER WORK.

FREE TRAINING SCHOOL OF THE WOMEN'S EDUCATIONAL AND INDUSTRIAL SOCIETY, No. 47 East Tenth street.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE HERALD:—

Permit me to ask space in your columns for some consideration of a most interesting subject, namely:—The present condition of working women and the employments open to them. It has been estimated that they number in this city and immediate vicinity over 75,000. I believe that the sum would be considerably augmented were it possible to reckon those who try by stealth to eke out their scant resources, and who would feel bitterly disgraced were it known that they were so engaged. The labor of women outside of the household is cheap, because the supply exceeds the demand, and because competition and poor work have reduced sewing prices to a starvation point. No manufacturer can be blamed for this; trade prices must sympathize with competition and the intrinsic value of services rendered. The misfortune lies in the fact that there are too many half competent women, without independent homes and means, and too few callings open to them. The Cooper Union has opened to women many profitable occupations and professions; but there is a numerous class unable to reach the advantages there afforded, because of lack of early education or paucity of present resources. Help for this may be found to some extent in the Compulsory Education bill recently passed in this State. The better fruit of this wise law will be borne in another generation; but just now we must deal with those souls already grown and demanding to live their own lives, although fettered by the disabilities of ignorance and its attendant curses. These disabilities must be met and remedied if we would counteract their evil results, and we are convinced that an important agency lies in domestic pursuits. If respectful and faithful service can meet the reward of considerate and interested kindness we shall perceive great alteration in the condition of domestic service. When the kitchen forms as important a part of social economy as the drawing room it will not be difficult to fill intelligently the place dignified by the importance of its uses. Most important they are, for upon the ability and disposition of the cook depend in the greatest degree the health and tranquillity of the family. Once this truth is recognized there will not be wanting women of sense and capability to enter upon an occupation which is the most responsible, rather than the most menial, in the social scale, and second only in importance to that of the mistress of the house. Marriage and the foundation of the family give rise to the question of comfortable and healthful living, and here begins the duty of the wife; upon her devolves the choice and disposition of food, and the care that no waste or misuse shall dissipate the family substance. Half the ill health in the world could be avoided by regular physical habits and the judicious use of food. If we eat wisely we can live well. Food meets the first needs of our bodies, and is to them what education is to the mind. Whoever fails to exercise discrimination in its selection and preparation, is but little above the savage, who satisfies his hunger with uncooked roots and half raw animal flesh. We cannot, therefore, too highly estimate the importance of understanding this subject in its various bearings so thoroughly as to insure its intelligent treatment.

We are now organizing at our training schools a series of lectures in class and practical delineations of the science of domestic economy, beginning with directions for the choice and purchase of the different articles of food, and following practically their economical and suitable combinatian, as well as their preparation in the most wholesome and appetizing manner. The system of instruction will be direct and plain, and will necessitate the use of everything, the waste of nothing, and the indispensability of cleanliness and punctuality; suitable utensils for cooking will be used, and their various purposes demonstrated; the selection and assimilation of foods will be considered in direct application to the formation of a varied daily diet, at once palatable and nourishing. The elements of food will be studied in their relation to the sustenance of the brain, the growth of the muscles, the amount of animal heat requisite to a healthy physical condition and to the necessary counteraction of the waste and wear of life. In fine, our endeavor will be to teach the application of philosophical common sense to the management of the household. While realizing the importance as well as the safety of a domestic life for women we cannot ignore the fact that very many of them are forever barred from its comfort and recompense. Apart from it the average female worker cannot earn what would be an insufficient living for a man; but if the quality of woman's labor can be improved its marketable value will be increased, and with better work and wages will come relief and strength to many a woman who now wavers upon the verge of misery and degradation. The social structure is infirm which is not founded in the purity of its women, to whom are given the divine positions of mothers and teachers of men, and yet in the midst of this Christian community women every day yield up the crown and treasure of womanhood to save themselves from starvation. That charity abounds among us which permits no misfortune to become known without rendering immediate assistance. If these poor girls were forcibly brought here from a far-off land and cast between the two alternatives of sin and starvation, men and women would instantly rouse themselves to strong and sympathetic action and meet that emergency promptly. Are we individually free from all the responsibility entailed by the present aspect of this question of social economy? And can we look upon the perpetration of those sins against humanity which daily blot the character of this Christian community without becoming in some measure participators in them? I sincerely believe that among those denominated "fallen women" nine-tenths of the number have entered upon their wretched lives from severest compulsion. Alas! for the utter sadness and hopelessness of the problem! "Life needs some solution even to unspeculative minds, and the explaining of this dreary tangle to the poor seems to lie in the province of that work which Christ commended to His followers." The prosperity of a race or country endures only so long as its virtues are retained, and the very sacred high altar of all the virtues is builded in our homes. If the taint of ignorance and corruption festers there it will eat outward through the family, through society, through the State, until all are utterly rotten and unstable. Let us, then, seek to purify the source, that the outflowings may be full of moral health and strength, and that the influence upon the time may be ennobling and elevating in practical and daily use.

C. L. HODGES, President.

OUTWARD BOUND.

There was a noticeable falling off in the number of outward bound passengers yesterday. It is evident that the grand summer rush, so to speak, is at an end, and henceforth we may look only for the ordinary state of affairs in the way of passenger traffic to Europe; although, by the way, every year shows a vast increase. The rivalry created by the reduction of steerage fares caused at first a stampede among the needy, and many having nothing to do here availed themselves of the cheapness of the trip to return to the old country. Four steamships left yesterday—the Samaria, the Queen, the Republic and the Victoria—all well freighted with merchandise and a fair number of cabin passengers. The new steamship City of Richmond, of the Inman line, was unusually crowded both fore and aft, and toward three o'clock, the hour announced for her departure, the wharf presented an enlivening scene. All the other steamers left at an early hour, but in waiting for the United States mail the City of Richmond was detained until the afternoon, and as it was impossible for her to cross the bar before dark, Mr. Nicholson, the general passenger agent, intimated to those on board that the vessel would not leave until eight o'clock this morning. She looked exceedingly trim and neat at her wharf yesterday afternoon, and will doubtless scud over the Atlantic in true Inman style.

THE CLERICAL ROMANCE CONTRADICTED.

A communication from Amenia, Dutchess county, has been addressed to the HERALD, contradicting in several material points the information given to a reporter and published in yesterday's issue, under the head of "Another Clerical Romance." From this letter it appears that the person who figures in the report as a Methodist Episcopal clergyman and pastor of a large congregation at New Orleans, is not and has never been a clergyman of any denomination, being a bricklayer by trade and for years a follower of "Boss" Shepherd at Washington. The entire account of his meeting with the second wife is fabulous. There was no flight, no clandestine marriage. The meeting between the two wives was not of the boisterous nature described. Their behavior attracted some attention in the neighborhood, and on this slender foundation was based a story given to the HERALD's representative which tends to make the misdeeds of a commonplace bigamist compromise the reputation of a church.

THE WAGES OF SIN.

Adventures of Louis Maximilian Van Eeten, the Forger.

He Attempts Suicide by Laudanum.

CHANCES OF RESTORATION.

History of His Crimes and His Romantic Career.

Louis Maximillian Van Eeten is a name that will be long remembered in the police annals of this country—so prolific in its record of forgeries, murders and criminal adventures of every kind. He was a man of marvellous powers; he possessed a wonderful personal magnetism; his brain delighted in combinations which should belong rather to the lovers of chess—only he used men as pawns and knights, and not the "graven images" that should represent the game. The world was to him a vast chequerboard in the game of life, and "men and women merely players." He was born of parents in the upper station of life in Antwerp, Belgium, and it is the saddest commentary on his unlawful courses that his old gray-haired father was ashamed of him. His education was of the most liberal character; all advantages of tutors and governors were afforded him, and when he outstripped the youth of Antwerp in his studies congratulations poured in upon his parents, who little dreamed that the brilliant youth would render himself famous only by his crimes. Alas! that such heaven-born genius should be buried in a dishonored grave! At the age of twenty-five Louis Max Van Eeten seemed to be the favorite of fortune. In the old cathedral city of Antwerp no honor seemed too high for him to achieve, no mercantile success too grand. But there was an odd humor always cherished by the brilliant adventurer, and that was that a "pent-up Utica confined his powers" in the city of his birth, and so he sailed for the El Dorado of all bright spirits—New York. The New World to him contained boundless opportunities for achievements undreamed of in the steady old city of his nativity; and so, bidding farewell to old associations and the conservative influences of the Old World, he arrived in the metropolis of this country about twenty years ago. Instead of devoting himself to legitimate mercantile operations he seemed, from the commencement, to believe in the power of chicane over that of honest effort, and we note the result. He brought to New York two cargoes of miscellaneous goods and seemed to have made a successful venture. He was encased in the panoply of respectability in the shape of letters from the oldest firms in Belgium, and other parts of Europe, the authenticity of which, of course, was not suspected, and at once entered into the society of the élite of New York, who were only too glad to welcome a distinguished foreigner with utilitarian ideas. He was bland of speech; his manners betokened a knowledge of polished society, in fact, he was au fait in all those delicate arts which woo the senses and lull suspicions to sleep. With the fair sex he was an especial favorite, and no distingué reunion was complete without the presence of the lion of the hour. He was not long in discovering in the daughter of one of the Schmidt family—of the old Knickerbocker stock—an affinity; and although the young girl mentioned was engaged to a very worthy gentleman to be married it was not long before the fascinations of the young Belgian supplanted the older suitor, and they were engaged to be married.

The wedding took place with all the éclat attending such celebrations in the old times, and the bride and groom sailed for Europe, followed by the congratulations of all their friends and relatives save one. This gentleman, a brother of the bride, had his suspicions aroused as to the character of the husband, and these terrible suspicions were confirmed by the knowledge of some fraudulent transactions which had come to his knowledge, and were directly traceable to the bridegroom, who had so recently carried away his sister in so triumphant a manner. Armed with the proofs of the young man's criminality he followed the loving twain—four days after their departure—in the steamer Arctic. Arriving in Europe he discovered that every credential, every letter of recommendation Van Eeten had brought to America was forged. Sick at heart, he knew not what to do, but at length resolved to go to Antwerp to discover, if possible, the status and surroundings of the forger's family. Here he was met by the father of the culprit—a fine old man, with many sorrows whitening his hairs—who confessed to him that his son—this same Louis Maximilian Van Eeten—had ruined him, and well-nigh brought his gray hairs in sorrow to the grave.

Tracing the wedded couple from point to point, this brother at length found them in London, where the man was living under an assumed name. Concealment is the first sign of guilt. How this brother's heart was wrung when he discovered his pet sister to be the life companion of a man who had forfeited all claim to the mercy of men can only be known to him. He persuaded Van Eeten to come back to New York, and assured him if he meant to lead an honest life that he would assist him to do so. The wedded pair returned to this city; the relatives held a sort of family counsel—a gathering common enough in Europe, where affairs of social import are discussed; but such was the craft of Van Eeten that before the brother arrived he (the culprit) had persuaded the family that he was a persecuted man and that the chivalrous brother was hounding him without cause. Now comes

THE SECOND ACT IN THE DRAMA.

It was not long before an establishment was started in Bowling Green. Offices were sumptuously fitted up, with "Van Eeten and Company, bankers," "Van Eeten & Co., European agents," "Vessels wanted," &c., upon the plate glass windows, proclaimed to the passers by that another great firm had consented to open an agency in New York, to connect their business with Europe. Owners of vessels—it was a dull time—were anxious to charter their ships to sail to Hong Kong, Liverpool or Cape of Good Hope. Van Eeten was ready to charter them all. One day a commission merchant called on an old South street shipowner and said:—

"Do you know Van Eeten & Co.?"

"Why?" was the response of the wily old shipper, who was looking out himself for a chance to employ his idle vessels.

"Because I have just chartered a ship to them to go to South America."

"Don't do it!" said the old ship owner, "they are not good!"

The merchant left the office determined to let Van Eeten & Co. severely alone, but he had not gone five minutes before the shrewd (?) South street shipper—thus learning Van Eeten wanted vessels—went over and chartered three vessels to the firm for the West Indies.

Before two weeks Van Eeten & Co. had twenty ships chartered, sent out to various ports with stone, ballast or rosin, or some such stuff, and, as no payment was to be made to owners until the ships returned with their freights, it was not long before the victimized ship owners discovered they were at the mercy of the swindlers, and in order to be relieved of their contracts—of return voyages with all attendant expenses—they compromised with Van Eeten & Co. and paid them about $40,000 to cancel the contracts.

During all these weary years—years full of heart-burnings and mortifications to the devoted young wife and her family—this man pursued his nefarious practices. He was incarcerated in Ludlow Street Jail for eighteen months, and after that frequented the fashionable watering places such as Saratoga and Lake Mahopac, by his plausibility and great intelligence rendering himself a pleasant companion and gaining the friendship of some of our best citizens. About five years ago, however, commenced a series of crimes, the consummation of which ended in

HIS DISGRACE AND FLIGHT.

He had been discovered by Captain Thomas Sampson, of the detective force, whose special duties lie in the detection of Wall street frauds, in endeavoring to pass raised checks on Fisk & Hatch, the bankers. He was arrested on this occasion, but such was his address and craft that the case was not made out against him and he was released. Detective Sampson was absent from the city for two days a short time afterwards, and during this time Van Eeten went to Jay Cooke & Co. and sold them a $1,000 United States bond (genuine) and received their check for it, which, of course, was properly certified, &c. He raised the amount of this check to and repaired to the office of Wells, Fargo & Co. to invest the same in railroad bonds, disarming all suspicion by asking time to examine carefully the coupons, &c., to see if they were all right. The fraud, of course, was soon discovered, the detectives were apprised, Sampson went to a house known to be frequented by the swindler, on Twenty-eighth street, and all that was found of Van Eeten was his whiskers. He had taken a Pacific slope.

A short time afterwards the Bank of California, in San Francisco, was defrauded by receiving a $10,000 United States bond which had been "raised." The New York officers were apprised, but they did not at first suspect Van Eeten, because they thought he had Wells, Fargo & Co.'s $77,000, and logically considered a $10,000 risk was too small for him to take. They did not know what they subsequently learned—that the money stolen from Wells, Fargo & Co. was snugly deposited in the vaults of the New York Guaranty and Indemnity Company in this city. The career of Van Eeten in California proves him to have possessed consummate ability as well as arctic coolness. His lodgings were in sight of Police Headquarters, every officer was known to him by sight, and their roll call must have been listened to by him with a sort of grim satisfaction. This man was an outlaw; but he was defying the world with a bravado which had something of the heroic in it. When the note of alarm was sounded he bought tickets for Acapulco. The California officers were sent to Los Angeles in Lower California to intercept the ship. Instead of sailing, however, he went on shore again in San Francisco, tore up his tickets and remained within the smell of the kitchen of Police Headquarters. Eventually, however, he went to Acapulco, St. Thomas, St. Vincent, Kingston, Jamaica (but never left the ship at this latter port, knowing of the extradition treaty with England), then to Havana, and finally landed in New Orleans.

IN THE TOILS.

United States District Attorney Noah Davis sent Detective Sampson to bring him back to this jurisdiction. The task was a difficult even a dangerous one. Governor Warmoth aided the officer. Judge Durell warned the detective not to arrest him in court. The moment Van Eeten was released on the charge before the latter Judge he was served with the warrant on the New York charges while he was surrounded by his counsel and friends. No sooner was the process delivered than a writ of habeas corpus was thrust under the officer's nose. The detective accepted service, and said he wanted to see the town and would be back in an hour in court to answer. The prisoner was put into a carriage, behind a pair of fast horses, and then ensued

A RIDE BETWEEN LAW AND JUSTICE.

The carriage was followed by another and a man on horseback. The chase was kept up in the devious streets of New Orleans for an hour. At length, by a fortuitous turn, the pursuers were left behind. Four negroes were hurriedly thrust into the carriage, which drove on; the officer, with his charge, plunged into a cellarway, and as the carriage turned the next corner the man on horseback was almost alongside of it. From this cellar the officer got upon the roof of the building, scrambled over several more and was received finally by a man named Weil, from which place they reached the railroad station. Here a yard of red flannel on the top of a long sugar cane stopped the train, and the officer and his prisoner were en route.

At Jacksonville the train was boarded by a gang, who demanded where the kidnapped man was. They were a rough looking set, with scant clothing and well-armed men of the border. The officer pointed out the prisoner as the detective, and claimed to be the prisoner himself, saying he was well treated and wanted to proceed, a piece of strategy not denied by Van Eeten. Whiskey was surrendered as a peace offering, the majesty of Mississippi law was satisfied and the train sped to the North.

But little more remains to be told. Van Eeten was tried, convicted, sent to prison for nine years and $9,000 fine, pardoned by Governor Dix, who, it was rumored, exercised his clemency on account of some prison revelations to be made by Van Eeten, and no sooner had the culprit been pardoned than he reported to Detective Sampson at his house.

THE ALLEGED SUICIDE.

Louis Maximilian Van Eeten, the famous bond forger, having taken a dose of laudanum in Hudson County Jail, some time between eight o'clock on Friday evening and six o'clock Saturday morning, and being in apparent danger of death, a HERALD reporter went to the jail to ascertain full particulars of the attempted suicide. The unfortunate man was stretched naked on a mattress in the witness room, surrounded by a crowd of prisoners and jailers, who were busily engaged, under the directions of a couple of doctors, in shaking, rubbing and slapping him all over the body with a view to keep him awake. A galvanic battery was in full operation, and the man's body was made to feel its effects in a way that ought to give an appearance of life to a corpse; but beyond a dull, stolid stare, and an occasional half uttered and almost indistinct groan, no sign of animation was given. The body was quite red and sore from the effects of several hours' incessant rubbing and slapping, and the knees were cut from falls which occurred in making attempts to force him to walk. A scrubbing brush was applied with relentless vigor to his feet and sometimes even to the softer portions of his body, and it was evident from the appearance of increased animation in his leaden stare and the half-stifled groan, accompanied by a nerveless effort to move the arms as if to escape the pain, that his sense of feeling was still pretty strong. After several hours' continuance of this work a short rest was taken, and no sooner was he left to himself than he relapsed into a heavy sleep, snoring with a peculiar moaning cadence. He was then lifted up, and five prisoners moved him about the floor, with a view to make him walk, one of them grasping him tightly around the body from behind, two more holding up the shoulders and head and the other two putting his legs through the motion of walking. This was one of the most extraordinary processes that could be imagined, and would be laughable in the extreme if the object was not to save a human life. He was jerked and bumped and heaved in a way that would have shaken the life out of a man of weak constitution; but it only seemed to do him good by irritating him and keeping him awake, which seemed to be the great thing desired. This was continued till the prisoners got tired out, when he was again stretched on the bed, only to fall asleep the instant he was left by himself. Dr. Stout, the County Physician, gave it as his opinion that the effects of the poison were now over, and that he only suffered from exhaustion. A quantity of beef tea, with an ounce of brandy and fifteen grains of ammonia was then pumped into his stomach, and he showed more sign of life than previously. At a quarter past seven yesterday evening his pulse was beating at the rate of 108 per minute and his condition gave more reason for hope, though not sufficient to warrant a decided opinion as to the probability of his recovery.

He was first noticed about eight o'clock yesterday morning, snoring very loud, and on the jailer trying to awaken him it was discovered that something was wrong. On Deputy Jailer Ryerson being called he found a small bottle having traces of laudanum beside the bed, and immediately summoned medical assistance. As this could not be procured for some time the poison had time to take effect, and it is even probable that it was taken on Friday evening when he went to bed. On the arrival of the doctors an emetic was administered and the treatment above described commenced.

Captain Lees, of the San Francisco detective force, who is here in the capacity of United States Marshal and made the arrest, does not believe he intended to commit suicide but that he must have been in the habit of taking laudanum, and on this occasion took an overdose without intending it. He accounts for his having the laudanum by supposing he had it in a bundle he had with him when arrested. Captain Lees thinks the cheerfulness of disposition evinced by Van Eeten the day before the supposed suicide is conclusive evidence of the absence of any wish to kill himself. He explains his expression about "going before a Judge to-morrow that would give him a fair trial" by his satisfaction at the prospect of being tried in a United States Court rather than in a State Court, against which he entertained a strong prejudice.

THE WAR IN CUBA.

It would seem, from recent advices, that the insurgents are still carrying on their aggressive operations with relentless persistency. The old worrying mode of assault continues to be in favor, and, while the Spanish soldiery and volunteers are at all times "under arms," their opponents apparently succeed in taunting and defying them, under circumstances which prove conclusively the inefficient means which have been adopted to suppress the rebellion of an oppressed people. Plantations are burned at will, provision trains are captured with ease and raids made without loss or detriment to the invading party. Mr. W. I. Spec, who has just returned from a tour through Cuba, states that on the 4th ult. a party of insurgents attacked Fort Lookout, about six miles from Trinidad de Cuba, and killed sixteen Spaniards. After doing as much damage to the little fort as the space of an hour would permit them they retreated to the mountains. A few nights succeeding this adventure they made a raid on a large mule train in the vicinity of Trinidad de Cuba, and, after a brief skirmish, captured it without the loss of a man. During the month of June the insurgents destroyed an extensive plantation near Santa Maria. The news was despatched to Santiago and troops were at once ordered to the scene. Meanwhile, under cover of darkness, the insurgents, evidently on a raiding tour, hastened toward the Morro Castle, which commands a prominent position at the entrance to the harbor of Santiago, and cutting down a sentry as they passed by, seized the government boats, crossed over to the other side, where they quickly demolished the huts of the pilots and fled to the mountains. Not many days afterwards a party made a raid at Cumberland Harbor, destroying several huts, and, doubtless by way of bravado, fired at the Spanish man-of-war Arapiles which was anchored near Guantanamo. After all, then, it appears that the war is being prosecuted with energy on the part of the insurgents. Mr. Spec states that many of the Spanish soldiers have been ordered home.

THE GIRL BABY HATER.

Henrietta Weibel, the little girl who attempted to destroy a baby at West Farms, as published in the HERALD yesterday, had not been removed from the Tremont police station up to nine o'clock last evening. Since the youthful prisoner was committed by Justice Wheeler, in default of $1,000 bail, to await the action of the Grand Jury, Captain Steers has been anxiously awaiting the arrival of the Tombs prison van to convey her to New York, where she can be taken care of by one of her sex. She occupied herself yesterday by alternately laughing, crying and reading "picture papers" considerately furnished her by the Captain, who has shown her every kindness in his power. The girl's mother has not been to see her since the arrest took place, nor have, in fact, any of her relatives, as it is understood they are all exceedingly poor. It is probable that the would-be baby burner will be removed to the Tombs to-day.

CONSPIRATORS TO BE ARRESTED.

Considerable excitement was caused yesterday by the circulation of a report to the effect that the members of the Plymouth Church Investigating Committee were about to take the aggressive against those who would fain ruin Mr. Beecher by circulating slanderous and libellous statements concerning him to the world. The rumor was that District Attorney John Winslow was about to cause the arrest of six individuals who have been conspicuous in carrying on the warfare against Plymouth's much defamed and venerable pastor under the degenerate banners of Theodore Tilton. The charge upon which these arrests were to be made was conspiracy to defame and injure Mr. Beecher. Mr. Winslow disclaimed any knowledge of such intention when the subject was broached to him, and at the same time declined to express any opinion bearing upon the scandal. He was as ready as ever to discuss the planetary system and to delve into the thicket of stars "above the world so high," but would not breathe a syllable of information touching the Star Chamber sessions at Storrs'.

CRISP CRITICISMS OF A CITIZEN.

A citizen who heard the story of the pending arrests for conspiracy said:—"I do not believe that it is the intention of the committee to do anything of the sort. Nothing, in my opinion, could be more remote from their intentions on the subject. They do not want to make an issue before the courts, as they know no good could possibly come of such a proceeding for their favorite, Mr. Beecher. It may have to come before the courts eventually, however, and it will be time enough for them to 'bid the old boy good morning when they meet him.' They occupy a position similar to that which Jeff Davis did during the 'late unpleasantness'—i. e., 'all they want is to be let alone.' Time and quiet is the best cure for 'a mind diseased' such as is that of the public in this epoch of scandal. They boast about prosecuting this investigation to the bitter end, 'without fear or favor, probing the matter to the bottom, no matter who may be hurt,' and all that sort of talk. It means nothing, however, but

and morality of the community. As for the suit brought by that man Gaynor, of Boston, against Tilton for libel, it is simply ridiculous," said the speaker, "as he can throw no light upon the case one way or the other, and there can be little doubt as to the course Justice Riley will pursue on Monday morning when the case is brought up for a hearing. Gaynor, I understand, has no evidence to give in the case other than that which has been published already. He has gained his point in the matter of notoriety, however, if that is of any satisfaction or value to him. The complaint is defective in itself. We all know that Tilton had nothing to do with the publication of the sworn statement made before the committee. That was the work of his 'faithful friend' and groomsman, Augustus Maverick, who wrote a card to the press exonerating Mr. Tilton from any knowledge of or hand in the giving of that statement to the press. Maverick gleefully took all the responsibility for that act, so that the ground for complaint, if there be any in that matter, lies against the enterprising Augustus. Mr. Tilton admits, however, having sent the card alluded to in the other complaint to the newspapers. He did not, he claims do anything that he has done to which the friends of Mr. Beecher take exception for the purpose of slandering or defaming that gentleman. What he has said he still says he can prove, and he has been solely actuated by the desire to defend himself."

THE PAST SEVEN DAYS

have been momentous in the extreme to the cause of religion, morality and society. The fireside, the pulpit, the public streets, the railroad cars and steamboats, the quiet farm house, the spacious halls of the fashionable summer retreats, the seashore and the shady dell, the hill tops and depths of the valley have echoed but one and the same tune, and the keynote thereof was the scandal of the age. The press of the country has taxed its space to the utmost to make room for the publication of everything bearing on the subject uppermost in the minds of the people. Papers have been in unprecedented demand everywhere, and

Those now read who never read before,
While those who always read have only read the more.

The week has been one of longing with the investigating Committee.

LONGING FOR MUTUAL MOULTON

to appear before them and produce those letters, which he is supposed to have in his possession. The public has shared in the anxiety to have Frank demonstrate the definition of his cognomen by making a full, free and frank statement of "all he knows," as requested to do by Mr. Beecher. But, the dear committeemen, and the still dearer people, were not to be gratified in their expectations. Mr. Moulton, owing to indisposition on the part of a member of his family, found it essential to absent himself at Narragansett Pier, Conn., the entire week. His own indisposition to comply with the request of the committee is apparent. It will be remembered that when he appeared before the committee upon its organization he made a statement in which he said, "I hold the opinion that Mr. Beecher should frankly state that he had committed an offence against Mr. Tilton for which it was necessary to apologize, and for which he did apologize in the language of the letter, part of which has been quoted." He contended that he "deemed it necessary for Mr. Tilton to have made the defence against Dr. Leonard Bacon which he did make, and that Mr. Beecher should refuse to be a party to the reopening of this painful case." The committee were not satisfied with this statement, and demanded a detailed account of all Moulton knows of the matter. He positively refused to accede to this demand. An issue was made between him and the committee, and Mr. Moulton stands to-day upon the same negative ground he occupied when he declined to give that detailed statement.

CONCERNING TESTIMONY.

The publication of the examination of Mr. Tilton in the papers on Monday furnished food for the indulgence of the most insatiable scandal loving maw, and was accepted variously, according to the views of the reader, for or against Theodore. It was taken up by the press, picked to pieces by editors and subscribers, reproduced with incisive comments by the same papers in piecemeal, and now there are few men or women to be found who would be competent to serve as jurors, were they eligible otherwise, in the case, for the reason that they have formed an opinion which it would require evidence to remove. It must be admitted, however, that the wisdom of the Plymouth Investigating Committee in which were being made against their pastor by making public every word of the testimony taken by the stenographer before that body that fell from the lips of the ex-editor of the Golden Age was generally indorsed. The committeemen are themselves well satisfied with their course in this particular at this stage, though earlier in the week there were a few gentlemen who dissented from the opinion of the majority. Mr. Tilton's subsequent card, which appeared on Tuesday in the columns of the press, asserting that the testimony was not given in extensio; that he did not say he had no other evidence to produce in support of his charge of criminality between Mrs. Tilton and Mr. Beecher, caused some surprise. It was proved upon inquiry that the testimony taken was a complete transcript of the stenographer's notes, but that there were two occasions upon which Tilton went to Mr. Storrs' house, when the short-hand writer was not present, and on each of these visits cried and made speeches, charging the offence cited. For the future he will be particular to ascertain whether the stenographer is on hand before he talks to the committee. Mr. Tilton expresses himself as dissatisfied with the mode of proceeding of the committee throughout, and as for the boasted friendship of the reporters for him in a fraternal sense, he remarked in the presence of the writer the other evening, "Gentlemen, you are not my friends; if you were you would not interview me." So much for his opinion of journalistic regard for an afflicted brother. It is for the readers to judge whether Mr. Tilton is correct or otherwise.

TILTON'S ARREST.

The highly virtuous Bostonian recent importation, Gaynor by name, but not a gainer in the present transaction, came upon the stage on Wednesday and hustled poor "tempest tossed" Tilton off before a justice of the peace to answer the charge of libel. The event was regarded as a sensation for the time being, and a local journal attached sufficient importance to the transaction to strike off an "extra," which was cried through the quiet streets of Brooklyn till past midnight. The following morning Mr. Tilton appeared, with counsel, before Justice Riley and an effort was made to have the officious complainant withdraw the charge, as he had no witnesses to prove the complaint. The effort failed and the case was adjourned until Monday (to-morrow). In the meantime the committee meet each evening and some days in the afternoon and bend their best energies to the prosecution of their arduous labors, keeping their lips closed to the reporters, or pedestrians of the press, as they are now more frequently termed, in their nocturnal "walk rounds" about the Heights of Brooklyn. On Friday evening Mrs. Tilton appeared before the committee and read over the testimony taken the week previous. She also explained several points upon which they desired to be enlightened touching the causes which led to the animus exhibited by her husband against "the pastor and friend of his youth and manhood." The developments of yesterday were few, the reported arrest for conspiracy being the chief topic of conversation.

THE PARTIES IN THE CASE

are scattered. Mr. Tilton remains at his lonely habitation, No. 174 Livingston street; Mrs. Tilton sews, sighs and sadly sings in the back parlor of her kind friend's residence, Mr. Ovington, No. 148 Hicks street; Mr. Beecher, who is in excellent health and good spirits, left town on Friday afternoon for Peekskill, where he is enjoying a peaceful, quiet Sabbath; Frank Moulton may be at Narragansett Pier; Frank Carpenter is at Homer, N. Y.; H. C. Bowen is at Woodstock, Conn., and the other characters in the affair are enjoying themselves, or bemoaning their lot, as best suits their frame of mind in the bearings of the scandal at this stage of proceedings.

MRS. TILTON'S EXAMINATION.

The following has been given unofficially as a skeleton outline of the examination of Mrs. Tilton, before the committee of investigation, on Friday evening:—

EXAMINATION OF MRS. TILTON.

The only witness examined by the Committee was Mrs. Elizabeth Tilton. She had no written statement at all; it was an oral examination, lasting between three and four hours. It was extremely affecting and bore the very stamp of truth.

Mrs. Tilton went on to uncover in detail the sorrows that had afflicted her home for many years past. She performed her task in a manner that moved almost to tears. She recounted the efforts she had made to restrain Theodore from going after strange women, but he openly announced to her that he had wholly changed the views he had held on the marriage relation, and she had, she said, too much reason to believe that he was living the life which was consistent with that change. When he brought the Woodhulls to her house and imposed upon her she used every means in her power to induce them to leave, but they would not go. She finally, in despair, sent for the police to remove them, and when the Woodhulls heard that they left. Referring to the scene of this night, when Susan Anthony was there, she said it was a scene of great violence and excitement. She said she never saw Theodore so crazed as he was that night. Miss Anthony slept with her and made very free reference to the stories in circulation about Theodore's life. She said most solemnly that it was not true she made any confession to Susan Anthony of any improper act on her part. All she said to her on that subject was that Theodore was circulating stories, and had been for a long time, to her prejudice and that of Mr. Beecher. She had not a thought of saying that there was a word of truth in it. There was no truth in that statement. It was entirely false. She does not believe that would say that she ever gave a hint in that direction. Mrs. Tilton was asked if she ever, of her own motion, wrote a word, either in a letter or a statement, affecting improperly herself or Mr. Beecher? She answered she never had; that the most she ever did was to copy papers that Theodore had prepared for her. Sometimes she did not even know the contents of the paper. Theodore would make assurances that it was best to do it for the peace of the family, for her peace and for his peace, to help him out of his business troubles. On one occasion this was done while she was sick in bed, upon the strongest statements by him that it was for her best interests. When the statement was prepared for Dr. Storrs to see, and was helping the thing on, Theodore wrote every word of the statement and brought it to her to copy. She copied it until she got to the clause charging that Mr. Beecher had made improper advances to her. She refused to copy it further, and told Theodore that it was false and a great wrong upon Mr. Beecher. Theodore said, "Never mind, it is best you should do it. I have got my true statement of the story all written here (showing her a roll of manuscript). I want that statement of yours for the story to hinge on. I want to show it to Dr. Storrs." This was done. About four weeks before the council sat she felt that she had committed a great wrong, and, without consulting anybody, she went to Dr. Storrs, called his attention to the statement, and told him that it was false. She explained to him how she had yielded to Theodore's forcible persuasions. The Doctor said to her he wished he had known it earlier, and asked her if she was aware that she had committed an enormous sin in charging such a thing on Mr. Beecher. She said "Yes; but it was Theodore's will and not mine," or words to that effect. In reference to the "sin" alluded to in the Scoharie letter in connection with she had not then read the book through, and her idea was to refer simply to the sin of allowing the influence of a husband to be lessened by her regard for her pastor. But she said Tilton's manner toward her was such—his words of disrespect and the expression of his wish that she was out of the way and not near him, that she felt "there was a damper between them." She said when Mr. Beecher met her he was kind, generous, sympathetic, that she felt that in his presence she was respected and appreciated. She said she feared that feeling had carried her too far, and it was that and that alone, she referred to when she said, "I now see my sin."

MRS. STANTON AGAIN.

The Brooklyn Argus of last evening has another interview with Mrs. E. C. Stanton, and in answer to the query whether the previous interview was correct she said:—

Mrs. STANTON—It was, certainly. The only inaccuracy which I recall was the statement as to the time when Mr. Tilton told his story to Mrs. Bullard and to me. It was not his "table talk," as one of the papers made so much of; it was told in the library, after dinner. In other respects the report was correct.

REPORTER—You have no doubt in your mind but that Mrs. Tilton made to Susan B. Anthony?

Mrs. STANTON—Not the slightest; not any more than though I had heard it myself. Susan always speaks the truth.

REPORTER—And that confession was of a criminal intimacy with Henry Ward Beecher?

Mrs. STANTON—Yes; criminal as the word is generally understood. Mrs. Tilton did not look upon it in that way.

REPORTER—But it was a confession of what Mr. Tilton has since charged?

Mrs. STANTON—Precisely.

REPORTER—You know, beyond all doubt, that Theodore Tilton told to you and to Mrs. Bullard the story of his wife's infidelity?

Mrs. STANTON—Certainly. The main facts of the case he told us at the time I have specified. Many incidents related in the Woodhull statement I have never heard of; but the story itself I heard from his lips.

REPORTER—After Mr. Tilton had told you this story did he ever deny it?

Mrs. STANTON—Yes. When the Woodhull thunderbolt had fallen Mr. Wilkeson called upon Mr. Tilton and the latter flatly denied having made any such statement regarding his wife. As soon as I was informed of this I said to Miss Anthony, "I have proof of my story, and I want you to go straight to Mrs. Bullard's with me." We went there; and in an interview, lasting over an hour, I recalled to Mrs. Bullard Mr. Tilton's conversation to us on the Beecher matter, and she fully confirmed my statement to Miss Anthony. On the same occasion Miss Anthony, indignant at the message Mr. Wilkeson had communicated from Mr. Tilton, stated to Mrs. Bullard her interview with Elizabeth on that memorable night.

REPORTER—To whom does this account, in the Chicago paper interview, refer?

Mrs. STANTON—To Mrs. Fernando Jones.

REPORTER—What do you think of the statement credited to her?

Mrs. STANTON—Perhaps I ought to extend the same charity toward Mrs. Jones that she has toward me—believe that the interviewer reported her words incorrectly. At the same time I readily understand how, not knowing that I had decided to make anything public, Mrs. Jones might have told her story out of simple friendship for me. That is, in order to hide the truth.

REPORTER—Have you any idea what testimony

could render if he wished?

Mrs. STANTON—Nothing more than that he has been in the confidence of Mr. Beecher for many years. After a visit which the latter once made to Mr. Moulton, Frank said:—"We have had Plymouth church on its knees here." Of course, his testimony ought to be had.

REPORTER—Are you willing to appear before the committee, Mrs. Stanton?

Mrs. STANTON—No, not before that committee. When gentlemen who are in the confidence of its proceedings tell me that the integrity of every witness who appears against Mr. Beecher is to be impeached, I have no wish to give my testimony. I belong to a family of lawyers, and I have great respect for the law. When the case comes before a civil court

I SHALL WILLINGLY APPEAR

if summoned. There is no stronger proof that the committee have a difficult case in sustaining Mr. Beecher than its understood determination to impeach the integrity of every witness against him, and no better proof of the strength of Mr. Tilton's position than its subterfuges in trying to undermine him by attacking the characters of all the ladies of his acquaintance. Can Mr. Beecher, in his circle, boast nobler, truer, purer women than those identified with the various reform movements in this country? Neither Mr. nor Mrs. Tilton need be ashamed of as Grace Greenwood, Celia Burleigh, Anna Dickinson, Lucy Stone, Susan B. Anthony or Paulina Davis, who have all been honored visitors at his house. It is beneath the dignity of any man or committee of men to attempt to shadow lives like these.

REPORTER—Do you think Miss Anthony would be willing to testify before the committee?

Mrs. STANTON—I think not; but before the civil courts she undoubtedly would.

REPORTER—Mrs. Stanton, do you believe in the doctrine of free love, as advocated by Mrs. Woodhull?

Mrs. STANTON—No; I believe in law. I have always been in favor of doing everything in harmony with law. In my address on "Marriage and Divorce," which was made in substance before the Legislature of New York, I gave my views on

THE WHOLE SOCIAL QUESTION.

The speech is published. Any one can refer to it.

REPORTER—The Chicago Mail and Post attributes to Mrs. Jones these words:—"Miss Anthony would not have revealed a confession of criminality made by Mrs. Tilton to any one—not even Mrs. Stanton." What have you to say on that?

Mrs. STANTON—Mrs. Jones did not tell to the Mail and Post all that she might have told. Miss Anthony and I have been intimate friends for more than thirty years. When we met the evening after the confessions, both fresh with astonishment, it was perfectly natural that we should mutually confide. And we did so.

REPORTER—Have you heard from

since the publication of your statement?

Mrs. STANTON—I have. She has been on a lecturing tour, and has been very unwilling to say anything about the matter. She considered it would be a breach of confidence.

REPORTER—Did you read Mr. Carpenter's statement, published in the Argus?

Mrs. STANTON—I did, and in its confirmation I have to say that during my recent visit to Paulina Davis at Providence she told me that she had heard this story from Oliver Johnson's family long before I knew anything of it.

REPORTER—What do you think of Mr. Tilton's arrest?

Mrs. STANTON—I was in hopes that it would bring the case into the courts, but I suppose some other means will have to be taken to accomplish that end.

At the conclusion of the interview, which had been pleasantly seasoned with a lunch and spiced with racy remarks on a variety of topics, Mrs. Stanton observed, "I don't like to be represented by the press as striking a blow at a woman; but when it comes to the women o the suffrage movement and Mr. Beecher I prefer to let him kick the beam, though he may take some one woman with him."

IS THEODORE TILTON INSANE?

[From the Brooklyn Eagle of yesterday.]

This is a question that many people are asking to-day. It is a question that very intimately concerns the happiness of thousands of others in this distracted community. It is a question the solution of which would go far to settle one of the most perplexing social difficulties that ever divided and exasperated a people. It is a question that possibly involves the personal safety, if not the lives, of two members of this community, and upon it the Eagle attempts to throw some light.

THE CAUSE OF THE INVESTIGATION.

It is a matter of public notoriety that a brother of Theodore Tilton was for some time an inmate of the Flatbush Lunatic Asylum, and that he died insane. This fact, the unaccountable performances of Theodore Tilton in relation to the all-absorbing investigation now going on, and the following letter, which explains itself and which was recently received at this office, were the moving causes of the inquiries instituted by the Eagle, the results of which are here given.

JERSEY CITY, July 25, 1874.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE BROOKLYN EAGLE:—

If the people of your city cannot reconcile the insincerities, the fickleness, the cunning, the polish, the apparent openness, the frankness and the duplicity of Mr. Theodore Tilton, perhaps if you could see Dr. ——, of Trenton, he could tell you something of Mr. Tilton's family's mental history. I refer you also to ex-Judge ——, of ——, who knows the whole of the Tilton family and can relate incidents of their aberrations. I knew Theodore Tilton's poor book peddling brother in Keyport. This poor creature had a wandering mind that often betrayed itself. He died with loss of faculties. If you go to Keyport, where Tilton's father now lives, you will find but one belief among the people there, and that is, that Theodore Tilton is suffering under strong delusion. They will tell you that it takes but a little spark to fire the timbers of the Tilton house.

I write this merely in charity to Mr. Tilton, believing that it bears directly upon and in the end will account for the mystery that now agitates and divides your community. In strict confidence, (Signed) ——.

ON THE WING.

On Wednesday last, armed with letters of introduction to responsible parties, the reporter of the Eagle went to Keyport. This place, a beautiful village of three or four thousand inhabitants, is in Monmouth county, and is situated on the Raritan Bay. It is reached by a delightful sail of two hours by steamer from New York. Making his headquarters at the Pavilion, a seaside hotel kept by an old resident of Brooklyn, the reporter soon put himself in communication with reliable sources of information and went to work.

STATEMENT OF THE FIRST PARTY.

The first party of whom inquiries were made is an old and respectable inhabitant of the town, a gentleman of some scientific and of good intellectual acquirements, and related, not very distantly, to a New York municipal officer of high rank. The desired information was freely given, the only condition made being the omission of the informant's name, a condition made in every instance by the kind hearted people who deprecated equally public notoriety in the Beecher-Tilton case and any possibly arising differences from this cause among themselves.

From this gentleman the following facts were learned:—The father and mother of Theodore Tilton and several of his uncles live in Keyport and vicinity. They have always been considered a "queer" set. Theodore's father was originally a shoemaker, and was in the business in Greenwich street, New York; acquired some means, increased his property by a life insurance on the life of the lunatic son who was treated at Flatbush, and now is quite well to do in the world. The family originated near Middletown, a few miles from Keyport, and was considered an old one. The grandfather of Theodore, on his father's side, died many years ago, and nothing was known in Keyport, or at least could be learned on brief inquiry, of his mental peculiarities. Of his sons—Theodore's father and uncles—Theodore's father was considered to be the "soundest" one, mentally, of the number. One of his uncles travelled about, shoemaking a little and playing on the fiddle a great deal. Another was a carpenter. Another, "Ziekel," as he was familiarly termed, now dead, had two sons, George and Benjamin, by one wife, and a daughter, Mary, by another. Benjamin now lives in New York, and is janitor of the Irving Bank Building. George now lives in Keyport. Before going to New York Benjamin got in a "queer" way. He went there at the instance of the present cashier of the bank who took an interest in him. The cashier lives in Keyport. It is believed that Benjamin's mind is right now. George has been "in a queer way for years back." He was a carpenter. He would get discouraged and give up business without assignable cause, as he was well to do and had a nice place. His wife got him off to Virginia six or seven weeks last winter on account of his mental condition. He is still "in a queer way," has, apparently, a species of hypochondria. He would quit work for no reason, say nothing for a long time, and then declare that he was going to die. His mind is evidently affected. Theodore has not been to see his mother for several years, although it is only two hours from Brooklyn, by a beautiful ride down the Bay, which seemed to be an odd way of loving her. "Ziekel" and another brother, uncles of Theodore, built two houses. One of the houses was unfinished for fifteen years. The uncle who was a carpenter was very peculiar. He would work at his house three or four days and then neglect it for a long time. "Ziekel" would drink whiskey, but never discovered anything that would be termed insanity. The daughter of "Ziekel" had been insane for years.

This was the substance of what this informant knew, communicated without much attempt at questioning and without attempt at arrangement. This gentleman volunteered the statement that the father and mother of Theodore were respectable people, and that the mother had repeatedly expressed her belief in the innocence of Mrs. Elizabeth Tilton. His father, on the contrary, had said that he knew Theodore had been a wild boy, but that he hardly thought he was so bad as to make such a charge as he had made unless it was true. The informant said that public opinion in Keyport was divided on the subject of the Beecher-Tilton affair, but that there was no doubt the Tiltons, as a family, were "queer."

AUTHORITY NUMBER TWO.

The next person to whom the reporter applied was a lady, a woman of fine attainments and highly cultured. Her residence is a beautiful one, looking out upon the bay, and the entire surroundings were those of elegance. This lady is a widow, and she is a very near relative of the New York official to whom reference has been made above. Not a little interest is attached to her narration, from the fact that she knew Theodore Tilton when he was a youth, in New York. She studied the photographic art in the same class with him, and by chance was thrown into contact with the early band of free lovers, who looked to Stephen Pearl Andrews as their high priest. Mrs. —— told many interesting incidents of Theodore Tilton's early career. She soon saw the evil influences of the people who surrounded him. He could date the wreck of his life from those associations. Mrs. —— became early horrified over the insidious and too often successful attempts of these early free love disciples to seduce from virtue young people with whom they came in contact, and promptly severed all association with them. A very interesting account of these early free lovers—the forerunners of the more pronounced sexual reformers of the Woodhull type—could be written from this lady's early knowledge of them.

But the reporter's mission referred to the mental history of the Tilton family and not to the morals of Theodore Tilton's early associates.

Mrs. —— confirmed in substance the relation given by the first informant. George Tilton, the cousin of Theodore and son of Ezekiel Tilton, was mentally defective. His half sister, Mary, by the same father, married a gentleman by the name of Carter. This cousin of Theodore became insane ten years ago on the occasion of a religious revival, when quite a young woman. She was sent to an asylum, and was supposed to be cured. She had separated from her husband. Mr. Carter instituted proceedings for divorce, but was defeated. They never lived together again, he practically deserting her. A year ago last winter, at another religious revival, Mary Carter again became insane. As she had been a schoolmate of the informant, and as her insanity appeared to be of a mild type, Mrs. —— provided assistance for her, and Mary was for some time in Mrs. ——'s family. The form of her derangement related to her religious life. She believed that she had lost her soul when a girl and had never possessed one since. She could not work, she said, on that account. Mrs. —— on one occasion said to her, "Mary, you say you have no soul; you have lived very well for years without one; don't you think it is foolish to talk so?" And the lunatic woman admitted that it was.

Mrs. —— informed the reporter that Theodore Tilton's mother was a Tilton, the relationship between Theodore's father and mother before marriage being that of second cousins. Mrs. —— expressed a belief that Theodore Tilton's mind was not right, and she had thought so for a long time. She also confirmed the statement that Theodore Tilton's mother believed in the innocence of Mrs. Elizabeth Tilton.

STATEMENT OF A MEDICAL AUTHORITY.

Dr. —— was the next source of information. This gentleman is a physician of excellent standing and long practice, a man of extensive acquirements and cautious judgment. Dr. —— stated that George Tilton is undoubtedly crazy. He had advised that George be sent to a lunatic asylum two years ago. His father, Ezekiel Tilton, was always very "queer." Edgar Tilton, Theodore's brother, who died insane, had a life insurance policy in the New York Life for $4,000. He applied to Dr. —— (the informant) to be examined, and the Doctor refused to pass him. Edgar then went to New York, and the examining physician of the company passed him. Dr. —— could not pass him on account of mental derangement. Only six months' premium was paid when Edgar died. Edgar was a poor book pedler, and the money for the first premium was saved in peddling books about the country. Theodore's father (Edgar's father also) was very cross when he heard Edgar had taken out this policy, but when the second quarterly instalment became due he helped pay it, as Edgar could not do it. Theodore's father was very "queer." When the company notified him to make out the proofs of death in order to receive his money, he took no steps for a long time. The company sent the papers for him to sign, but he never seemed to know what to do. Dr. —— finally did the business for him. The father seemed to be mentally incapable of the effort required, and but for the urging and the assistance, would probably never have taken any steps in the matter. Samuel Tilton, another uncle of Theodore, died four or five years ago. He was very "queer." Also, Mary Carter, a cousin of Theodore, is now in a lunatic asylum. Dr. —— was officially engaged in the examination upon which she was declared a lunatic.

ANOTHER OLD CITIZEN'S STATEMENT.

The reporter next called on a gentleman who has resided at Keyport for many years; is a Sabbath school superintendent, a citizen in high standing, both socially and officially. The importance of this gentleman's statement will be somewhat appreciated by the fact, as he informed the reporter, that he was then on the point of communicating the mental peculiarities of the Tilton family to the public through the newspapers, as having possibly an important bearing in the Beecher-Tilton case. The reporter of the Eagle saved him that trouble.

Of the paternal grandfather Mr. —— could give no information. The family originated down near Naversink, in Monmouth county. The sons were Silas (Theodore's father), Ezekiel, John, Horatio, Ashur and Jonathan. Of Ezekiel's children three have proved to be insane or very peculiar. George has been in an insane asylum. So has Mary. Theodore's brother, Edgar, was in an asylum. This lunatic was a dangerous one at times. But Benjamin and George Tilton have excellent women for wives. The insanity of Mrs. Carter is of a very bad religious type. Pretty much all the uncles of Theodore were addicted to drink. John has been dead for several years. He was "very queer," as they call it here. Horatio lives—nobody knows where. He was a sort of a wanderer, without home; his wife is dead and he a perfect sot. He has two sons, cousins of Theodore, now living in Keyport, one a carpenter and the other a blacksmith. Both are respectable men, although one of them is rather eccentric. The same trait sticks out. He has no capacity for business or for getting along. Horatio used to be a member of the Methodist Church and a leader of the choir. Jonathan settled near Middletown and never left that place. He is an upright man, but has no force of character.

Silas Tilton, Theodore's father, lives in Keyport. He was for twenty-five or thirty years a class leader in the Duane street Methodist Episcopal church. Theodore was born in New York. Theodore's imbecile brother was always shrewd enough to know when people were making fun of him, and in some respects he was quite talented. At times he seemed to have a mind equal to Theodore. For some reason unknown Theodore's father, after his long connection with the Methodist Church, left and joined the Baptists. Notwithstanding his position in the church, and notwithstanding all of the admonitions of his brethren, this father of Theodore has been a persistent drinker. He is, however, regarded as a respectable man, and his wife is an estimable woman. She was reported to have said that it made no difference what Theodore said, or what Mr. Beecher said, she did not believe in the guilt of Elizabeth Tilton. Ashur Tilton's wife says the same thing. Ashur Tilton has always been a respectable citizen. Theodore's wife used to visit both these families, and where, in his statement, he speaks of sending his wife into the country, it was to his father's and to Ashur Tilton's.

This ended the inquiry into the paternal branch of Theodore Tilton's family.

THE MATERNAL BRANCH.

The reporter then proceeded to Trenton, N. J., and called upon Dr. ——. This gentleman's name, if mentioned, would be recognized far and wide. He is a physician of many years' standing, of fine reputation. He is the President of the Board of Health of the city of Trenton. Presenting his credentials and stating his business, the reporter was cordially received, and was at once put in possession of the desired information. The inquiry related to the maternal branch of Theodore Tilton's family.

From Dr. —— the reporter learned the following facts:—

The maternal grandfather of Theodore Tilton was a Tilton. This man, William Tilton, left Monmouth county some thirty years ago, and came to Trenton, where he lived several years. He was possessed of a moderate competence and built a house in Hanover street, in which he lived. In consequence of some trifling loss (some $500) this maternal grandfather of Theodore Tilton went insane. He never recovered the use of his faculties, but died in that condition. William Tilton had two wives; the first had two children; she died in Monmouth county, and he married the second before he came to Trenton. The mother of Theodore Tilton is the daughter of William Tilton by William Tilton's first wife. By the second wife he had two sons and two daughters. The daughters are both living, having married in Trenton, and are respected members of society. Of the sons, one died of consumption, and the other one went deranged several years ago and was sent to the Trenton Lunatic Asylum several times. This son, Amos Tilton, went crazy over an invention to carry eggs to market without breaking them. He is now dead. William Tilton was a Quaker, and his lunacy was a matter of great surprise. From their quiet habits and equable tempers, Quakers generally retain possession of their wits to the last. According to this authority and the statement of one of William Tilton's daughters, the father and mother of Theodore Tilton were distantly related. This closed the inquiry.

SATURATED WITH INSANITY.

To recapitulate, from the testimony of reputable people who profess to know:—On the paternal side of Theodore Tilton's family his uncles have been eccentric, and two certainly, if not three, of his cousins are, or have been, lunatics. On his mother's side, his grandfather and his half-uncle, the son of that grandfather, were lunatics. There was an intermarriage between the Tiltons, Theodore's father and mother both being Tiltons; and from that union came Edgar, Theodore's brother, a lunatic, and Theodore himself—about whose sanity there is at least a grave doubt.

THEODORE'S BROTHER'S RECORD.

Returning to Brooklyn with these facts, the reporter proceeded to the Flatbush Asylum to obtain the record of Edgar Tilton's treatment there. Dr. McDonald consented to furnish the information with the greatest reluctance. He said that such records were generally considered sacred, and their contents were seldom revealed. Upon earnest request and the assurance that the fact of Edgar Tilton's confinement there was known and would be published, and that declining to furnish dates would not prevent the publication, Dr. McDonald granted the request.

Edgar Tilton, the younger brother of Theodore, was sent to the insane asylum at Flatbush in November, 1871. He remained there until the following January, when he was taken ill with an affection of the bowels. Word was sent to his friends, and he was removed to the residence of Theodore, in Livingston street, where he died two days after being removed from the asylum.

At the time of his admission into the asylum he was twenty-eight years of age. In appearance he differed very much from his brother Theodore, being about five feet in height, with small, pinched features, small head and black curly hair. His insanity dated from early youth, and took the form of imbecility, induced in part by an attack of scarlatina when he was about five years of age. His mania also included a variety of delusions, among which was a strong opposition to Freemasonry, and a belief that every one who approached him was a Freemason.

During the time of his insanity in its earlier years he had manifested considerable ugliness, and at times had attacked his parents or friends.

Although his insanity was induced in part by the attack of scarlatina in early years, yet, in the opinion of the physicians who were familiar with the details of his case, it should be placed under the head of "hereditary insanity." In their minds there was no doubt that it was in the blood and the disease in early childhood only assisted to develop the inherited tendency.

It was learned that Theodore Tilton never but once came to see his brother while the treatment in the asylum continued. Mrs. Tilton came often, and when the dying lunatic was removed, just before his end, Mrs. Tilton came alone in a carriage, and, accompanied by Dr. McDonald, took him to her house, where he died.

SYMPTOMS OF INSANITY IN THEODORE.

As it was the purpose of the Eagle to lay the facts of the mental history of Theodore Tilton's family before competent medical authority on the subject of insanity before giving them to the public, the reporter obtained from Mrs. Tilton, through a third party, a statement as to any peculiarities she might have observed touching his mental condition for some years past. Mrs. Tilton, it should be distinctly understood, had no knowledge for what purpose the data were required. The following peculiarities bearing on his mental condition were given:—

For twelve years he has shown an inability to get to sleep without being read to by the hour or more.

He would drink ale and porter after retiring, and then read himself to sleep.

He often complained of distress in the head, and of heat in the top of his head. He would often get up and walk the house in order to induce sleep, or he would walk the streets for hours, sometimes returning as late as three or four o'clock in the morning.

He would say all manner of cruel, insulting things to his wife, and then wonder that she felt badly, and would express his surprise that she should feel badly.

He has developed the peculiarity of frequently repeating the same story to the same person, who would be supposed to know the story in the first instance.

To these facts were added others which have appeared in the course of the investigation; the unaccountable eccentricities manifested; the contradictions apparently without motive; the strange behavior in writing two irreconcilable statements; his strange conduct in leaving his wife, returning, then leaving her again; his conduct in regard to the proposed transfer of the property to his wife and his subsequent refusal to do so; his proffer to permit his wife to take away her personal effects and his sudden and causeless refusal to permit it and the language he then made use of; his strange and persistent attempts to see his wife at Mrs. Ovington's after having been refused and without apparent motive for seeing her; his statement to Mrs. Ovington Sunday evening last that he had come to see what he could do for his wife, and his threatening and abuse of her almost in the same breath, and the fact that he has recently asserted that neither himself nor Mrs. Tilton nor Mr. Beecher would live a year; these and a multitude of strange actions which have been observed by all who have watched this case carefully were placed together in connection with the facts of Mr. Tilton's family history and were laid before three eminent medical gentlemen, two of them having had long experience in the study and treatment of the insane, and one of them having the highest reputation in this particular.

TESTIMONY OF EXPERTS INTO THEODORE'S INSANITY.

The first of these gentlemen stated in reply, that the belief had for some time been growing upon him, that Theodore Tilton is not in his right mind. He had felt serious apprehensions on the subject, and had privately conversed with reference to it with other gentlemen. The family history was a remarkable one; the blood of two families in which there was insanity, uniting in Tilton. He believed that Tilton's actions could not be explained in any other theory. He believed him to be insane.

The second of these gentlemen said that there was no doubt the family "was saturated with insanity. I am of the opinion that Theodore Tilton is insane."

The third of these gentlemen expressed his opinion in the most decided terms. He had been watching the case with deep interest, having had beforehand a partial knowledge of the mental history of Tilton's family. He believed Theodore Tilton to be afflicted with "emotional insanity, not yet developed into a homicidal tendency, but liable to be so at any moment."

IS MR. BEECHER'S LIFE IN DANGER?

This gentleman particularly expressed himself as believing that both Mr. Beecher and Mrs. Tilton were in danger, and that the greatest care should be exercised, or the end of the Beecher-Tilton case would be a tragedy. He also said that he believed the insanity of Theodore Tilton to be the true solution of the Beecher-Tilton case.

It should be known that both the friends of Mr. Beecher and of Mrs. Tilton have been warned to take measures of safety against any possible outbreak on the part of Mr. Tilton.

MR. BEECHER AND MRS. TILTON.

The following letter, addressed to Mrs. Tilton by Mr. Beecher, was written to her immediately after the publication of the Woodhull scandal:—

MY DEAR MRS. TILTON—I hoped that you would be shielded from the knowledge of the great wrong that has been done to you, and through you to universal womanhood. I can hardly bear to speak of it or allude to a matter than which nothing can be imagined more painful to a pure and womanly nature. I pray daily for you, "that your faith fail not." You yourself know the way and the power of prayer. God has been your refuge in many sorrows before. He will now hide you in His pavilion until the storm be overpast. The rain that beats down the flower to the earth will pass at length, and the stem, bent, but not broken, will rise again and blossom as before.

Every pure woman on earth will feel that this wanton and unprovoked assault is aimed at you, but reaches to universal womanhood.

Meantime your dear children will love you with double tenderness, and Theodore, against whom these shafts are hurled, will hide you in his heart of hearts.

I am glad that this revelation from the pit has given him a sight of the danger that was before hidden by specious appearances and promises of usefulness. May God keep him in courage in the arduous struggle which he wages against adversity, and bring him out, though much tried, like gold seven times fired.

I have not spoken of myself. No word could express the sharpness and depth of my sorrow in your behalf, my dear and honored friend. God walks in the fire by the side of those He loves, and in heaven neither you nor Theodore nor I shall regret the discipline, how hard soever it may seem now.

May He restrain and turn those poor creatures who have been given over to do all this sorrowful harm to those who have deserved no such treatment at their hands!

I commend you to my mother's God, my dear friend! May His smile bring light in darkness and His love be a perpetual summer to you! Very truly yours, HENRY WARD BEECHER.

WHAT THE PEOPLE SAY.

Let There Be Peace Amang Ye.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE HERALD:—

I canna see for the life o' me why this bleating continues in the flock o' Plymouth for ane lost ewe. Let her alane; for, in thae words o' Burns, "We a' can tell what is endured, but know not what's resisted." "Thae just man fa's seven times a day," and sae maun the just woman. Is not that what the kirk folk ha' been teaching these mony years? Noo draw off the dogs and let the hare sit. Puir, winsome lassie, why deave her wi' these bletherins? An' as for Beecher, did na King David o' glorious memory do waur to Uriah? It's a lang story sin syne. Still, there must be some fire where there is so much smoke, as the fox said. It's a' like the mountain in labor, an' will bring forth ainly a mouse; for it's plain that the committee will whitewash all, an' Tilton says the lassie is as white as snaw. I say, let the dead kairn their dead.

Had they never loved sae blindly,
Had they never loved sae kindly,
Never met or never parted,
They had ne'er been broken hearted.

Let us join in praying may the Lord break hard fortune afore them a'—Beecher an' Tilton—and not forgettin' the puir frightened dove that's almost dead o' a' this cooing and theorizing. Let us sing this psalm:—

May thae hearts of a' those sinners noo be saftened as the wax,
An' may the load a' sorrow yet lie lightly on their backs;
And thae tongues of scandal mongers frae this day be stricken dumb,
Who would make a mess o' scandal when there ainly was a crumb:
And may the Reverend Beecher be spared unto his flock
As long as the Atlantic waves dash over Plymouth Rock.

And may the little stricken ewe bleat still amang the fold,
An' keep clear o' a' the wethers, sae blatant an' sae bold;
And may the heart o' Tilton, too, be saftened till he weep,
And take thae little ewe again frae a' the blacker sheep.
I'm sure that if she erred at a', the creature ainly erred,
In being "shadowed" by the shepherd when he came amang the herd.

Then let us go a grazing in the pastures o' the Lord,
And let the pastor o' the flock be to his flock restored;
You wad nae find throughout the land, perhaps in Christendie,
A shepherd wi' a better crook nor a better sling than he.
An' if he find a wayward ewe 'tis better let her stray,
Than that the lambs should a' be lost—Then, brethren, let us pray.

PEACE.

Tilton and Beecher—A Christian's Letter.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE HERALD:—

Your paper has assumed an attitude in this Beecher-Tilton scandal that must commend itself to all fair and catholic minds as being above vulgar prejudice and unchristian bias.

No doubt you are in receipt of far larger numbers of articles on the subject than you can notice in your valuable paper.

Pardon me if I presume too much in asking a short space in its columns for a few remarks called forth by reading your caustic editorial in this morning's issue on "The Carrion."

Too true is it that the day that found Beecher before a tribunal awaiting the result of an investigation of Tilton's charges was a gala day in the camp of those social pests who long to see society upheaved and morality dethroned. These free lovers, woman's rights advocates, or whatsoever the name may be that designates persons of the Woodhull and Claflin stamp, deny truth, mock virtue, ridicule chastity, debase and prostitute love. Some of this school are not so radical as others, not so bestial in their ideas, but, nevertheless, these sentimental differences are silenced before a question threatening the stability of their common platform or in any social disturbance at all likely to add what they deem a lustre to their principles.

It is not a matter of surprise that these birds of prey should ravenously flock to where their choicest sustenance is found, to the quagmire of scandal and indecency.

They love to lay bare the family quarrels, to uproot the family altar and drag sacred ties out into the open arena of public criticism and vulgar curiosity.

They recognize no law but the gauge of their own appetites, no faith but the strength of their own passions.

In all their persecutions of Beecher they but extend to him their fellowship. It matters not to them whether subordination is compelled by guilt or induced by calumny. If they cannot secure a soul through one they do not hesitate to convey the impression of his initiation by the other.

So that, in doing or saying what they can to criminate Beecher, they but demonstrate the length to which they are determined to use any weapons that may fall into their hands.

But apart from this dangerous class is another, separated from them by a wall that grows higher and stronger as time advances. These are the class whose opinions might be prized, if they were not based on former antipathies and sectarian prejudice. I am astonished to find professors of religion—men good and true in many senses—men who stand out from their fellows as examples, men who should be the last to prejudge others, the first to defend the persecuted. Among these charity should be the main spring of all their actions; and yet now, when every Christian heart should extend to Beecher that heartfelt sympathy and generous confidence, there are those who seem to exult in Beecher's disgrace, as fulfilling some bitter prophecy—who say: "I told you so; he has always been loose; his life has been a libel on Christianity." "Alas for the rarity of Christian charity!" Do any of these so-called Christians know anything of Beecher's life-work—of the church he has planted and watered, and which God has graciously and bountifully increased; of the homes he has brightened by his presence and counsel; of the relief he has given to the wretched and suffering; of the souls he has led into that truer and better life; of all the cares and disappointments and sorrows, the load of responsibilities he has borne and which have gone to make up his ministerial career?

O that the Christianity of the present day had more of Christ in its examples! It is a terrible thought to feel that Christians cannot depend upon each other for support and confidence when the breath of scandal or the powers of darkness threaten to engulf their good name and character in the abyss of ignominy. Beecher has labored for Christ. It matters not in what form. He has preached as he has thought for the best; who shall dare to say that it has not proved to be so? But why stand in judgment passed by orthodoxy or heterodoxy? Let the mad voices of the voluptuary and the sceptic rave in their impotent zeal. As a moral people, as a great people, as a virtuous people and as a Christian people we must extend to Beecher a fraternal support. And while the evidence is still undisclosed, the verdict still unread, let Christian thought still remember the good done for the quarter of a century in the Lord's service, the genius and enthusiasm he has given to the cause—the whole life and the whole result of Beecher's ministry. Let us pray that he may come out of the fire unsinged, and that his triumph over his enemies may be as speedy as complete.

THE PRESS ON THE SCANDAL.

An Extravagant View of Tilton.

[From the Mohawk Valley Democrat.]

As the famed wind of the Arabian desert not only produces death but causes the most rapid decomposition of the body, so calumny affects fame, however much integrity, worth or virtue may abound. The base, blackhearted, triple-tongued, Janus-faced, cloven-footed calumniator, like the loathsome worm, leaves his path marked with the filth of malice and scum of falsehood, and pollutes the finest flowers, the choicest fruits, the most delicate plants in the greenhouse of character. Living, he is a travelling pest house; dying impenitent, his soul is too deeply stained for hell and should be driven to that imaginary elementless blank beyond the confines of all worlds, shrouded in all darkness of nonentity, there to roam alone through the ceaseless ages of eternity, without a pain or pleasure to relieve the awful monotony of that dreadful vacuum. O, reader, never calumniate the name of another! Sooner plunge a dagger through his or her heart. So deep does the calumniator sink into the murky waters of degradation and infamy, that could an angel apply an archimedian moral lever to him, with heaven for a fulcrum, he could not in a thousand years raise him to the grade of a convicted felon. Such is Theodore Tilton.

A Rock of Faith to the General Public.

[From the Mobile Register.]

We fear Mr. Beecher's life and character and preaching will not prove a rock of faith to the general public. It is not everybody that has believed that Plymouth church and the Plymouth pulpit have been nursing mothers to the purest godliness, although the latter has been likened to that of the Apostle Paul in Athens. We do not see why a very pure man of God, who can give rifles and Bibles to a band of ruffians to invade and convert a distant Territory with fire and sword, and admonish them that while the Bible was a good proselyte the rifle was a better; and who, in marrying a pair of adulterers, with the aid of the Rev. Mr. Frothingham, "thanked God for what these two had been to one another," should be held to be particularly scandalized were he suspected of yielding to "soft dalliance" with some one of the hundreds of "crazy women" who made love to him. We suppose a good Christian might refrain from inciting bloodshed for party purposes and might possibly abstain from calling God's blessings on an adulterous marriage, but we have the testimony of one of the purest of Bishops in a series of lectures on the Ten Commandments of the difficulty of keeping one of them. When he came to the seventh he opened with the remark, "My friends, this is the hardest of all the laws of the decalogue to keep." We think it pretty plain that the background of the evidence won't clear Mr. Beecher of the last charge. He has to disprove it specifically or the St. Paul simile will fail. If he does not, it will be a fall of the Humpty Dumpty sort, and "all the King's horses and all the King's men," including Plymouth church, will not be able to put him up again.

Meanwhile, the New York press continues to be lenient and merciful to Mr. Beecher. Not so to Theodore Tilton. They wait for proof to condemn Mr. Beecher, but they have used the rope with short shrift on Tilton, and hung him with "dog" placarded on his carcass.

Let the Swill Boy Speak.

[From the Springfield (Mass.) Republican.]

At last we get something important from Brooklyn. The livery stable keeper whom the Tiltons used to patronize has been "interviewed." He "expresses firm belief in Mrs. Tilton." The swill boy is yet to hear from.

The Worst from Mr. Beecher's Side of the Story.

[From the Milwaukee Sentinel.]

It is scarcely just to accuse those who have expressed an unfavorable opinion of the present aspect of the case of Mr. Beecher of doing so on a one-sided, or ex parte, as the law hath it, statement. Mr. Beecher's case looks the worst from his own side of the story. It is not what Mr. Tilton has said so much as what Mr. Beecher has said that embarrasses the friends of the latter. Many theories can be suggested on which what Mr. Tilton has said can be explained away or disproved; but the most ingenious person has yet failed to put forth any theory, compatible with innocence, on which can be explained what Mr. Beecher has said. Those who assume that an ex parte view of the case is being taken should bear this fact in mind.

"Betsey and I Are Out."

[From the Erie Despatch.]

Some evil-minded and captious critic once accused Kellogg of singing "Home Sweet Home," as if she lived in a hotel, and now Mrs. Tilton has gone still farther into the pathos of the thing and plays it on Mrs. Ovington's piano like a member of Sorosis, while Theodore lingers under a convenient window after having been refused admittance at the door. We would suggest a little rehearsal of "What is Home Without a Mother," and that Tilton be engaged to recite at the Hippodrome an amended version of "Betsey and I Are Out."

Fears That Mr. Beecher Will Not Clear Himself.

[From the Wilmington (Del.) Commercial.]

Mr. Beecher has again—though not now in any formal manner—asserted his cleanness of the charges against him. But will it be possible now, under any circumstances to be imagined, that he can come out clean and uninjured? We fear not. He will never again be the Beecher that he was of old.

What Did Nicodemus Want by Interviewing the Saviour?

TO THE EDITOR OF THE HERALD:—

The Kingdom of Heaven is not meat and drink.—Rom., xiv., 17.

An interesting narrative is contained in the third chapter of St. John's Gospel, from which some valuable information may be derived, correcting some phases of popular conclusion, viz.:—"There was a man named Nicodemus, a ruler of the Jews. The same came to Jesus by night and saith unto him, Rabbi, we know that Thou art a teacher come from God; for no man can do the miracles that Thou doest except God be with him." Now evidently this ruler of the Jews—of the strictest sect, a Pharisee—must have had an earnest object of inquiry to propound to this man of Galilee, a people held in the lowest estimation by the Jews, so that holding intercourse with them was deemed derogatory to the high ecclesiastical characteristics of the Jew; similar to the case of the Samaritan woman at the well, where it is recorded in John, iv., 9. "For the Jews have no dealings with the Samaritans;" and yet, to our unaided vision, it does not appear what this inquirer sought to obtain by his interview.

He states his great confidence in the teacher to whom he came. He had no doubt but that the Most High was "with him;" and still his inquiry (if so it may be called) is entirely obscure. The great Teacher to whom he came, however, at once divined the object of the call; He instinctively knew the needs of this inquirer, and therefore at once, discerning the question which Nicodemus would have propounded, gave him this memorable reply, viz.:—"Jesus answered and said unto him * * * except a man be born again he cannot see the Kingdom of God; except a man be born of water and of the Spirit he cannot enter into the Kingdom of God." Evidently, therefore, Nicodemus desired to learn how he should be enabled to see (and fully perceive) and be able also to enter into the Kingdom of God. Leaving out, for the present, the course to be pursued to obtain these great objects, it is very important that we should clearly understand the precise object which this inquirer desired to see and enter into. In the first place it was not an abode in heaven, in another and future state of existence, as the popular theory is, and from which theory (as long as it may be entertained) the grossest errors of construction will be given to very many portions of Scripture. The object sought by Nicodemus was an earthly possession. This is evidenced by the Saviour's own words in the twelfth verse in the same chapter, where He says, "I have told you of earthly things." And we will attempt hereafter to show by the acts and doings of Nicodemus that he was subsequently, by the means pointed out by the Saviour, enabled to see and enter into that desired haven. The words Kingdom of God or Kingdom of Heaven (which are synonymous) are so often thoughtlessly entertained, so little consideration is generally given to an analyzation of their meaning, preachers to the people taking it for granted that they (the words) mean to express the idea of an abode in heaven, a future state of existence, that it will be profitable to quote some of the various passages in Scripture where they occur, so that we may be able by their connection more clearly to ascertain what Nicodemus sought. For want of space we confine ourselves to those in Matthew. They appear thus in Matthew, vi., 33—But seek ye first the Kingdom of God.

Matthew, xii., 28—The Kingdom of God is come unto you; same Luke, x., 9, 11 and xi., 20.
Matthew, xix., 24—Than for a rich man to enter the Kingdom of God; same Mark, x., 23; Luke, xviii., 24.
Matthew, xxi., 31—Harlots go into the Kingdom of God.
Matthew, xxi., 43—The Kingdom of God be taken from you.

Commentators on these special words say:—"It is worthy of observation that Matthew is the only New Testament writer who uses the phrase Kingdom of Heaven, and that he uses this more frequently than any of the synonymous phrases. This peculiarity may be accounted for by the fact that he wrote for the special information of the Jews, among whom it had long been customary to use the word heaven or heavens instead of the more holy name of God, and by whom the phrase Kingdom of Heaven would be readily understood to mean the Kingdom of God. The word kingdom does not perhaps express the idea so distinctly as might be desired. Campbell and others prefer the word reign; it denotes a new religious economy instituted by God, and by His special care established and extended in the world." Into this new and spiritual religion, therefore, it was that Nicodemus desired to enter, and its value to fully perceive and see; something beyond the forms and ceremonies of the Jewish ritual, and believing, as he said, "Thou art a teacher come from God," he desired to learn, to see, to enter into the Kingdom of God; to lay aside the pride and arrogance of the Pharisee and adopt the humility of the Christian.

To note more strikingly that by these phrases the Master referred to the Gospel dispensation that He was then displaying before the world, let us refer to one of the preceding quotations—viz.: Matt., xxi., 43, "Therefore I say unto you the Kingdom of God shall be taken from you, and given to a nation bringing forth the fruits thereof." The Jewish nation, of whom the Pharisees and chief rulers were the representatives, had conducted themselves in a manner similar to the laborers (described in the parable narrated in the verses just preceding the verse quoted). They had long enjoyed high privileges. From time to time God had sent messengers to them, requiring them to render those acts of homage and obedience which they owed to him. Those messengers they had abused and some of them they had slain. God had now sent His Son, and Him they were desirous to slay. The cup of their iniquity was nearly full and judgment at hand. The Kingdom of God was to be taken from them and given to others who should produce fruit. This is the application of that parable, and such the great truth which it was designed to illustrate. If any doubt can now possibly remain in the minds of the reader that the true definition of the phrases Kingdom of Heaven and Kingdom of God is the "Gospel reign or dispensation," the religion taught by Jesus Christ (which it is the object of this article to elucidate), we may quote the commentary or elucidation of the Saviour Himself—which of course cannot be disputed—to the chief priests and elders of the people:—(Matt., xxi., 31.) "Jesus saith unto them, Verily, I say unto you that the publicans and harlots go into the Kingdom of God before you."

Commentary—"For John came unto you in the way of righteousness and ye believed him not; but the publicans and harlots believed him," showing that a belief in the Gospel is perceiving, and that taking its precepts to heart is entering into the Kingdom of God. And also, Mark, x., 23—"And Jesus * * * saith unto his disciples, How hardly shall they that have riches enter into the Kingdom of God;" "and the disciples were astonished at his words."

Commentary—"But Jesus answereth again and saith unto them, Children, how hard is it for them who trust in riches to enter into the Kingdom of God," clearly explaining that when trust and reliance were placed per se in riches the principles of the Gospel for the attainment of peace, joy, happiness would hardly be carried out. Numberless other commentaries of the Saviour might be quoted if we had space.

Now that Nicodemus did realize some of these blessings from a change of heart—a laying down of the Pharisee for the humility and kindness of the Christian—we are only enabled to produce two "signs," and, from what they evince, it is to be regretted that we have not more extended biographical notices of him. He adhered to the Saviour to the last. When Jesus was brought before the officers and chief priests and Pharisees, "Nicodemus saith unto them (he that came to Jesus by night being one of them), Doth our law judge any one before it hear him and know what he doeth?"

And at the burial we read, "And then came also Nicodemus (which at the first came to Jesus by night), and brought a mixture of myrrh and aloes, about a hundred pounds weight. Then they took the body of Jesus and wound it in linen clothes, with the spices, as the manner of the Jews is to bury," showing his Christian kindness of heart in defending him against unjust accusations, and kindly performing the last sad offices to his teacher and friend. WALHALLA, August, 1874.

Senex Doubts Christ's Resurrection.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE HERALD:—

The question was asked a few Sundays ago in your paper, "How long was Jesus in the tomb?" and the writer made out about thirty hours. This period was from the time He was taken down from the cross until the morning when the weeping sisters came to the tomb and found Jesus up and alive, clothed in the habit of a gardener. It is stated in the fifteenth chapter of St. Luke, forty-fourth verse, that, an application being made by the friends of Jesus for His body, Pilate marvelled if He were already dead. Now, the most natural thing for His friends to do after receiving the body was to do exactly what I think they did—endeavor to restore Him to life. How successfully they did so is apparent in the fact that in thirty hours after it is announced to His friends that He is alive. That He was wrapped in linen and taken to the tomb was all natural; that His friends procured and brought Him a suit of clothing is certain, being the clothing usually worn by the gardeners of that period, which was also a very proper thing for them to do, as they did not wish Him to be recognized by any but His friends. There does not appear to be anything very marvellous in all this. That the mission of Jesus to Jerusalem was not successful is evident, and that His persecution and suffering induced Him to leave Jerusalem appears to be the dictate of common sense. SENEX.

Episcopacy on Long Island.

For many years the Presbyterians were the great power on Long Island. The first inroads were made by the Methodists. The Baptists came later and moved slower. On the election of Dr. Littlejohn as Bishop the Episcopal Church took up zealously the work of home missions. A fund was secured for church building. Wherever a family or two of churchmen is found there a little chapel is run up. The watering places, where the fashionables go for the summer, afford fertile soil for Episcopacy. The island is now dotted all over with these little church chapels. The Bishop, who is one of the hardest working men in the Church, keeps his eye on all these little outposts and encourages the faithful by constant personal visitations. These inroads have not only alarmed but positively weakened the great Presbyterian interest of the island.

The Olivet (colored) church, which cost $20,000, was also destroyed, together with the homes of very many of the members. They had an insurance of $12,000 on their church building.

The installation of Rev. F. McCarthy and the recognition of the Amity Baptist church, of Chicago, was to have taken place last week, but Mr. McCarthy's eccentricities frightened his backers and at the last moment they backed out and left him and his followers unrecognized. His church is an open communion offshoot of his former charge.

A Baptist church has been organized at Boise City, Idaho, with a good minister and a flourishing Sabbath school.

The Rev. Samuel H. Meade, formerly a Baptist minister, and some time a clergyman in the Protestant Episcopal Church, made application before a council of Baptist churches, held last week at Bridgeport, for restoration to the work of the Baptist ministry—he having again become a member of that denomination. After a lengthy discussion it was resolved by the council that it was inexpedient to recognize Mr. Meade as a minister of the Baptist Church.

MISCELLANEOUS.

Dr. Julius Eckmann, the first Jewish rabbi of the Pacific coast, died a few days ago in San Francisco.

Bishop Simpson is to preach one of the sermons at Lake Bluff, during the camp meeting, which will open August 18.

There are three hundred different sects in England and seven have sprung up during the past year.

Rev. Isaac P. Brokaw, formerly of Newark, was installed pastor of the South Bergen Reformed church, Jersey City Heights, on Sabbath last.

Thirty students of Bates College, Me., are acting as waiters in hotels to earn money enough to continue their studies through the next academic year.

Rev. William Gray, of Fulton, Ill., a member of the Congregational Association of Chicago, has been invited to act as stated supply for one year by the Presbyterian church at Glenwood, N. Y.

There are seven Congregational churches in Texas. The oldest, in Corpus Christi, organized in 1868, has about forty members.

Rev. Dr. Cordner (Unitarian), of Montreal, is at Rye Beach, N. H. His pulpit will be supplied during the next six weeks by Rev. N. Hall and Rev. S. W. Bush.

William Everett has been invited to the pulpit of the Harvard church, Charlestown, Mass., of which James Walker and George E. Ellis were so long the honored ministers. His preaching is much admired by many, though it is very different in substance, style and manner of delivery from the eloquent oratory of his father, Edward Everett.

Rev. Peter Dean, who was dismissed from the service of the London Unitarian Missionary Society on account of his radicalism, has been reappointed to his mission, but at a reduced salary. It seems that his criticism of what is popularly called "Christianity" cost him £164 10s. a year, the difference between £40 and £205.

The Rev. Robert Bruce, of the Church Missionary Society, has a school of 150 boys, including six Mohammedans, in Ispahan, Persia, all studying Scripture in the midst of a Mohammedan land. His labors are mainly among the American residents. Mr. Bruce is now preparing a catechism to give the Persians a notion of the Protestant belief.

Ritualism in the English Church.

[London (July 20) correspondence of the Edinburgh Scotsman.]

Those who have attended Roman Catholic churches will remember how much music enters into the celebration of high mass, and this particular ritualistic Church is celebrated for its organ and music. It has surpliced choristers, men and boys, and one or two of the boys have exquisite voices. The programme of music for the communion service can hardly have been paralleled in Church history from the reign of Queen Elizabeth to Queen Victoria. It was as follows:—Introit, "Like as the hart" (Hoyte); Kyrie (Bridgewater); Gloria (Thorne); Credo (Macfarren); Offertory Anthem, "O! come every one" (Mendelssohn); Sanctus (Macfarren); Benedictus (Weber); Agnus Dei (Weber); Communio, O Salutarus (Rossini); Paternoster (Hoyte); Gloria in Excelsis (Thorne). When the celebrants had prepared the elements a stream of men entered the choir, which is separated from the chancel, and received the communion. When the men had communicated the women left their seats, ascended the steps, and, kneeling in the choir, but not very near the altar, also received the sacrament. The rest of the clergy not "celebrating" wore white surplices and green stoles. It seems that the stoles vary in color according to the season of the year, except that they are red on Martyrs' days and white on Innocents' Day. A considerable proportion of the congregation made the sign of the cross at the blessing, following in this respect the example of the chief celebrant, who waved his right hand so as to indicate the shape of the cross. It was also observed that several of the congregation made the sign of the cross on leaving the church, and most of them bowed to the altar on passing out of the church. The principle steadily observed throughout the ceremonial at this Church is the sacrificial character of the priesthood, and no Bishop's bill will constrain the clergy at the Church to give up this principle.

The Future Home of the Pope.

[From the Saturday Journal.]

The reports which have from time to time appeared in the press that the prisoner of the Vatican will remove to Malta, and that the election of the new Pope will be transferred from Rome to Valetta, have given increased interest to the Isle of the Knights of St. John. There is scarcely another spot on earth that speaks so plainly of the transitoriness of nations and their power as this little island, which, illumined by an African sun, rises like a rock of dazzling whiteness from amid the foam of the Mediterranean Sea. It was here that, 3,000 years ago, when history was in its infancy, the seafaring and mercantile Phœnicians gained a footing; here Greeks and Romans settled, and were followed, during the migration of nations, by Vandals, Goths and Byzantines, until, just 1,000 years ago, the Arabs, streaming toward the West, settled in Malta, and became the progenitors of the present population, among whom the Arabic element still retains pre-eminence in language and manners and customs, though not in religion. But this is not the end of the kaleidoscopic change of nationalities. The eighth nation which subjected the island was the Sicilian Normans; and they in their turn were displaced by the Knights of the Order of St. John, who made the little island of Malta the famous bulwark against which the Turkish power was shattered, and gave it such renown as caused it to be mentioned in the foremost place wherever examples were sought of cheerful self sacrifice and resistance unto death. Malta, and with it the Knights of St. John, succumbed to the power of Napoleon, and it became French; but ever since the fall of the great Corsican England's proud banner has waved over the isle which was possessed by ten nations before. And England has good reason for fortifying herself here and for making the rock bristle with guns, for it is her most important naval station in the Mediterranean. It is here that the fleet of iron-clads is anchored, attracted to these waters by the ever threatening Eastern question, and here that the route to India is guarded. No wonder that England annually spends over £300,000 in maintaining this important post and that even in time of peace she keeps a garrison here of over 6,000 men.

SEA CLIFF CAMP MEETING.

Tobacco as a Means of Growth in Grace—Rev. Mr. Boole on Sunday Cigars—Rev. Mr. Lawrence on the Work and Workers of the Christian Ministry—Amusements, Photography, Croquet, Boating and Serenading.

SEA CLIFF, L. I., August 1, 1874.

It is very apparent to even a casual observer here that fashionable life can exist about as well at a camp meeting resort as anywhere else. Saratoga and Long Branch are not more fashionable in their way than Sea Cliff is in its way. The conveniences for amusements, though of an innocent and recreative character, are so numerous and diversified here that many young folk of both sexes hardly ever think of going to the religious services, in tent or tabernacle. Fishing and boating, playing croquet on the public grounds or in private enclosures, moonlight sails on the tranquil bay, or quiet rambles at twilight through shady groves and Elysian rambles or midnight serenades to popular preachers or familiar friends, serve to break up what the worldly-minded young people consider the monotonousness of the camp meeting services. Hence the number of converts resultant from this first series of meetings, now almost closed, may be counted by a child. A few—a very small few—profess to have been sanctified here. But a real breach has not yet been made in Satan's lines. It was thought on Thursday evening that his lines would soon give way, but the ranks were closed again, and unless the who are to lead the hosts of the Lord to-morrow, shall inspire their troops with more and greater faith and courage than has been imparted to them hitherto, this meeting will close barren of numerical results of the saved. Bishop Peck has preached once already and given evidence of intense earnestness, both in his public addresses and private conversations, for the salvation of souls. Rev. Mr. Lansing, of Brooklyn, last evening preached one of the most practical sermons that has been heard on the camp ground during this season. It was right on the line of individual duty and contrasted the character and failures of the forgetful hearer with the success of the doer of the Word, who receives a blessing from God in his labors. If the people wanted to take God to their tents and cottages, as he had heard some of them pray they might, he suggested that if they would break themselves up into small parties and go and work for God they could have His promised blessing on their deeds. Some six persons answered his appeal by presenting themselves at the altar of prayer afterward.

This morning Rev. Mr. Lawrence, of Amityville, L. I., preached from Acts xi., 21, "And the hand of the Lord was with them; and a great number believed and turned to the Lord." His theme was the kind and character of the work to be done by the Christian minister, the extent and nature of the field of labor and the element of success which accompanies every faithful servant of Christ. If he were to go to his own charge alone he would shrink back from the task before him. But the hand of the Lord is with him. Moses would not lead the people toward the promised land unless God's presence went with him. And the Holy Ghost is the quickening power, which, through the word of truth in the Gospel, gives success to the work of the minister.

The congregation was not large—perhaps 1,000 or 1,200 persons. The boat was late and brought very few city people, and the rain storm which came on here this afternoon cleared the grounds and greatly lessened the numbers of those who came up in the last boat. The Seawanhaka brought up a godly company, however, and arrived here more than an hour earlier than the Sedgewick.

"A GOOD JOKE ON BROTHER BOOLE."

A report had been circulating about the ground for a few days that Mr. Boole had, on the Sabbath during the stay of the Southern bishops here, ordered from the hotel a certain number of cigars for their use. The story was very circumstantially put together, something like Theodore's charges against his friend of former days. It was retailed here as "a good joke on Brother Boole." But when a newspaper correspondent got hold of it and ventilated it through the press, what was before considered a good joke now became an accusation which demanded a public denial. Hence, at the close of Mr. Lawrence's discourse this morning, Mr. Boole referred to the published report of the transaction, and said that as a whole, and in all its parts, the story was absolutely false. He gave no such order to Mr. Clinton for cigars on Sunday as had been alleged, and had not had any such conversation as was reported then or at any other time, and there is no such entry of cigars on the hotel books as charged to the association through him. And now he defined his position on the tobacco question. It was supposed that Mr. Boole was as strongly opposed to tobacco as to alcohol, and the points of the good joke were that he should order cigars at all, and that he should order them on Sunday. But to-day he defined his position, both privately and publicly, on the tobacco question. It would be sin to him to use the weed, but he did not want to curtail others' liberty in this respect. If others found

TOBACCO TO BE A MEANS OF GRACE

they should use it: but let them be certain that it is a means of grace. He was opposed to the sale of cigars in the hotel, where Mr. Clinton, the manager, had set up a neat glass case containing choice brands of the weed. The case was removed, and guests have to find the tobacco and smoke it themselves. There are many things, he said, which a Christian man and a Christian association cannot do, but which unchristian individuals and associations may legitimately do. And this he conceived to be one of them. But while he did not propose to furnish tobacco, he had no desire to impose his own law on others. This world, he remarked, is barren enough, and if they could get any enjoyment out of tobacco, let them go ahead and get all they could. But he did not think its use is conducive to growth in grace. If this were a mere personal matter he would not notice it, but an association of Christian men is involved in it, and he deemed this public denial of the charge necessary. He did not, however, wholly blame the correspondent. The report of the alleged transaction had been given to him by a minister of the Gospel. My house, said Mr. Boole, has been the home of Methodist preachers from any part of the world. They have been welcome to its hospitality at all times. It has been my misfortune, perhaps, to have been born and brought up in New York and to know something of the intricacies of city life. I have had a good deal to do with reporters and newspaper men and have had ample opportunities to malign the character of my brethren in the ministry or to get off "good jokes" on them; but I never did anything like that. My mother's nature and the grace of God in me have kept me from doing anything like that. And I warn the brother minister who has circulated this story to be very careful how he meddles with the characters of others in future.

There was a general expression of belief among the people in Mr. Boole's denial, notwithstanding two persons came to me subsequently and reasserted the truthfulness of the original statement.

Two persons were baptized here yesterday by Mr. Boole.

AN ENTERTAINMENT TO THE PRESS.

A very pleasant episode in this encampment took place on Thursday night. When all the services of the day had closed and the guests had held their worship in the parlors of the hotel, and were dispersing to their rooms, Mr. Clinton gathered the newspaper correspondents, editors, publishers, &c., together, and with their ladies and a few other invited guests led them into the dining hall, where he had prepared an elegant supper for them. After the supper had been disposed of Rev. Brother Mooney, of the Methodist, was elected Chairman. He, after a few remarks, called on Mr. Hall, of the Worcester (Mass.) Gazette, who read a resolution expressive of gratitude to the Sea Cliff Association and to Mr. and Mrs. Clinton for their kindness and courtesy towards the correspondents of the press. Short speeches then followed for an hour or more. Mr. Williams was called on to speak of the HERALD, as combining in itself the religious and secular departments of the press. He reminded the company that Church people as well as wordly made news and read it, and the HERALD was first to ascertain the fact and to give to and gather such news from them. And the press, he thought, would yet be God's great instrument in saving the world, by disseminating religious truth. Rev. Mr. Taylor, of the Christian at Work, gave a humorous sketch of his first camp meeting experience and contrasted it with his present surroundings. Dr. Curry, of the Christian Advocate, led Brother Taylor, in imagination, back fifty years to his camp meeting experience, and contrasted it with the present, not very much to the religious benefit of the present. He liked Sea Cliff as a summer resort, though he believed the trustees will have to spend $1,000,000 and take ten years to fit it up. Bishop Peck looked upon the press as the mightiest power in the world for good or ill, and the position of newspaper correspondents he deemed one of the most important that could be occupied. Drs. Sargent and Poisal, of Baltimore, made a few remarks suggestive of blankets and pleasant dreams, and Rev. Mr. Boole, in behalf of the trustees, thanked the correspondents of the secular press especially, for the fairness with which they had written about this camp meeting. He did not want them to be biassed in any way, but to report things as they saw and heard them. He acknowledged that camp meeting people had not heretofore treated the representatives of the press in the proper spirit, and until he went to Round Lake he had no idea that there were so many Christian men connected with the secular press. He tendered all those present a cordial welcome to future gatherings in Sea Cliff.

This morning the press men were captured by the photographer on the grounds, and their pictures will appear in frames on Monday.

AN AMERICAN POPE.

A Radical and Equitable Settlement of the Roman Question.

NEW YORK, July 31, 1874.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE HERALD:—

In spite of the emphatic declarations to the effect that the Roman question is settled forever, the temporal power of the Papacy having ceased to exist on the 20th of September, 1870, when Victor Emmanuel's army took possession of the Eternal City, I do not believe it to be possible for a keen and impartial observer to deny the fact that, far from being dead and buried, the Roman question is, together with the Eastern problem, and to an equal if not superior degree, the very black point which threatens Europe with a general conflagration at a moment's notice.

The Papacy, as it existed since the times of Charlemagne, with a temporal sovereignty not powerful enough to ever become a menace to any one, but yet sufficient to secure the perfect independence of the Holy See, was, it should not be forgotten, the key stone of that European politico-social building which neither the Reformation nor the French Revolution—those two solemn thunder storms—succeeded in pulling down, so wonderful was the vitality impressed to it by the genius of Roman Catholicism.

It is easy to understand, then, why, notwithstanding the present total obliteration of his temporal power, Pius IX. remains the prominent figure of the world, not simply because he is the head of Catholicity, but also, and much more, because, though deprived of his States, he still is the highest personification of that principle of authority, the very basis of European governments—either monarchical or republican, the ticket does not matter.

If an illustration of my allegation were needed I would only refer to the shuddering of anxiety which is universally felt from one end to the other of the earth, but more especially in Europe, every time the telegraphic spark brings the news of an indisposition of the Holy Father.

Were Queen Victoria, or the Czar, or the Emperor Wilhelm—or Bismarck himself—to die to-morrow the impression resented at large would be sound, no doubt, especially on the dismissal of the German Chancellor, who is the deadly antagonist of the Vatican. But even the death of the Teutonic Mephisto would not by far cause a frightful commotion like the one sure to follow the world-wide spreading of those four words, and this tremendous shock will not result solely out of the noble character of Pius IX., whose stubbornness in what he believes his right has reached the limits of sublimity. No! But the present Pope having maintained unrestricted his non possumus against the spirit of the future, and never missed an occasion of revendicating the St. Peter's dominions as as integrant part of the traditions of the Church, his death will, of course, be the signal for the reopening of that deadly struggle between the declining and the rising politico-social order of things, each one of which is earnestly advocated by powerful nations, armed to the teeth and ready to take the field for the triumph of their scheme. Already and for years past the great impending contest rages in the diplomatic spheres, and no one is ignorant of the numberless exertions, combinations and intrigues to which both partisans and enemies of the temporal power have had recourse in order to prepare the ground and secure the election of a Pope favorable to their exclusive views on that question.

"THE POPE IS DEAD,"

It may be thus asserted that the future Conclave will have to fulfil the most difficult and delicate task which was ever imposed upon an electoral body, it being placed between two adverse parties, equally strong and imperious in their demands, which do not admit of the least conciliation. On one side, the Jesuitic or ultramontane element, which dreams of a restoration of the temporal power, and has for its supporters France (her government, at least), Spain, Portugal, Austria, Belgium and the south of Germany. On the other side the so-called liberal and anti-papist Europe, represented by England, Italy, Holland, Russia and, above all, Prussia, which leads that implacable crusade against the Vatican, not so much on account of the emancipation of mankind from the clerical yoke as for the sake of that most to be dreaded form of despotism—a State religion, on the model of Russian orthodoxy—the Kaiser becoming then a two-headed despot, like his good brother, the Czar, at the same time Emperor and Pontiff, holding in his right hand the keys of Siberia and in his left one those of Paradise. In fact, the highest political interests are involved in this question—Who will be the future Pope?

Suppose that the Conclave should elect to the Supreme Pontificate of the Catholic Church a red man entirely devoted to the ultramontane interpretation of the apostolic sacerdoce, including Popish infallibility and temporal sovereignty (that is to say a member of the overwhelming majority among cardinals), it is but too evident that a schism of an unheard of magnitude, closely followed by the most horrible politico-religious war, would burst out and cover the old Continent with streams of blood and heaps of wrecks.

Suppose, on the contrary (which is very improbable), that the haughty Chancellor and his allies should succeed in influencing the Conclave so as to secure the return to the Holy See of one of the few Cardinals (either Italian or German) more or less openly adverse to Antonelli's policy, and whose first act as a Pope would be to give up the antique claims of the Papacy undauntedly defended by Pius IX.; in short, a Pope willing to make his peace with Victor Emmanuel and acknowledge the Old Catholics, headed by Father Hyacinthe and Canon Döllinger, as genuine sheep of the Christian flock. Well, an equally disastrous conflagration would salute the election of such a liberal Pope, which election would be with reason considered as an invaluable triumph for Bismarck's policy and a decisive step towards German dictatorship all over Europe.

Moreover, it may be said that politics and religion are unfortunately so much mixed at the present day in Europe, owing to the state of confusion and decomposition into which that Continent is plunged, that, apart from the ultramontane tendencies of the whole French and Austrian episcopates, the appointment to the chair of St. Peter of an Austrian or French Cardinal (especially if a French one) would not—and, let us say, could not—be tolerated by Prince Bismarck, and would arouse anew the international hatred from the Danube to the Loire.

However, Pius IX.'s death is an event which cannot long be delayed, if we consider the old age and infirmities of the venerable Pontiff, whose dismissal will be the signal for the meeting of the Conclave and the election of another Pope.

How, then, are we to avoid the tremendous hurricane which, it seems, must fatally burst out at that time?

Simply by the election of a prince of the Church altogether exempt by both his nationality and his education of the traditional influences and secular prejudices characteristic of the European Catholic Episcopate—a man who, besides, could not be suspected by any of the rival Powers of favoring the secret designs of the one at the expense of the other, for the very good reason that he would not belong to any of them.

And where is to be found that Pope, that messenger of peace and fraternity, if not in the ranks of the American Episcopate, composed of citizens of a Republic that does not mix up in clerical matters?

Strongly impressed with that great principle, "The Church free in a free State," which is the law in our country, the modern Sixtus Quintus would inaugurate, as a natural consequence of his inborn ideas, a new era of grandeur and moral influence for the Papacy, without any danger of this bold and wise course exciting the least jealousy or suspicion among the rival European Powers.

The American-born successor of Pius IX., in order to convert to his renunciation of his temporal power the ultramontanes, "more Papists than the Pope himself," would have only to quote in his bull to that effect those very words of his illustrious predecessor to the American pilgrims a few weeks ago:—

"The United States is the only country where I am really Pope in the eyes of the government. I am always afraid lest European governments shall oppose or control my acts, whereas I can freely send pontifical documents to the United States without fear of opposition on the part of the government."

Could a more striking justification be needed by the future Pope for the spontaneous abdication of a power which had certainly its reason of being for centuries, but cannot any more be detained in face of the inexorable logic of modern times, quite hostile to the abnormal coupling of Church and State matters?

The Pope might thus either continue to reside at Rome or move the headquarters of the Church to any other place in Europe or in America, as he might judge convenient; besides, steam and electricity, in suppressing distances, would enable the Head of the Catholic Church to govern his world-widely spread flock from Jerusalem, Malta, or any city in the United States, with the same speedy effect as if he chose to remain in the capital of the new Italian Kingdom.

In that manner one of the most imminent causes of a general European conflagration would be avoided, without any of the grave religious or political interests involved in the Roman question being damaged.

For the sake of the peace of the world all Christian governments should unite in urging the venerable members of the future Conclave to give their votes to one of the American Eminences whom His Holiness will very likely create in the next Consistory.

AD MAJOREM POPULI GLORIAM.

THE AMERICAN CARDINAL DISCUSSION.

[From the Liverpool Post.]

It is well known that the Pope is one of the kindliest men, and that where he can do a favor he is always ready to oblige even a heretic. We are bound to assume that he knows something of what is going on all over the globe; but we shall probably not be far wrong if we venture to suggest that his desire for universal information does not show itself to the extent of taking in the New York papers and making himself master of their contents. It is equally true, no doubt, that His Holiness considers that he is under no obligation to consult the English press, and if in a matter about which the Americans appear to feel strongly, we reproduce their grievance in our columns, it is merely in the hope that the appeal for redress may meet the eye of one or other of the Holy Father's influential counsellors in this country who might be considerate enough to make a representation on the subject to the Vatican. The sore point with our kinsmen is that they have not and never have had a cardinal. Their political and social creed rather frowns upon titles and dignities, but this is one of those numerous cases with which His Holiness must be familiar, in which men are much better and less disagreeable than their principles. He need be under no apprehension that a prince of the Church would be deemed a standing affront to the doctrine of republican equality. Equality is a technical fiction—used by Americans who have got up a few rungs of the social ladder in the same sense as that in which the Pope subscribes himself servus servorum. In fact, the Americans have rather a passion for the ornamental side of society. Their constitution prohibits an order of nobles, but see how they grasp at the distinction of "Hon." and what a run there is upon the titles which are to be earned by a nominal connection with the militia. It would, therefore, be doing them a real kindness if the Pope were to give them a cardinal. It is in no angry but almost in a tearful mood that the NEW YORK HERALD protests against the policy of maintaining for the Sacred College the character of "an Italian ring." "We cannot cease," says our contemporary, "to regret that a country that gives the Papal office a liberty it possesses in no other lands should be overlooked in distributing the highest offices of the Church." America, the HERALD contends, is "certainly entitled" to a cardinal's hat. There are a good many hats now vacant, and as the ornament has lost much of its old value in Europe, His Holiness could not do better than send at least one to the United States.

THE COURTS.

Motion was made before Judge Pratt, in Supreme Court, Chambers, yesterday, on behalf of John Dennerline, for an order compelling the Police Board to recognize him as a police officer of Morrisania and pay him as such. The answer sent in to the alternative writ was that the trustees of the township just before the annexation passed an ordinance by which eighteen additional men were appointed with a view of saddling them on the city. These being matters of fact as to the appointment of the relator being in due form, Judge Pratt denied the motion, deciding that the Police Board were entitled to a jury trial.

MARINE COURT—PART 1.

Action for Slander.

Before Judge McAdam.

Henrietta Bromberger vs. M. A. Bamberger.—This was an action for slander, damages being laid at $1,000. The parties to the suit are Jewesses and close neighbors, residing respectively at Nos. 383 and 385 East Houston street. The plaintiff keeps a small grocery, while the defendant is housekeeper for the landlord of the tenement premises No. 385. The alleged slander was committed on Friday, April 22 last—a Jewish holiday—when Jews and Jewesses were plentiful in the streets and doorways of houses. The plaintiff was reclining on her arms on her coal box, outside the door, having a quiet confab with some of her neighbors, when, as alleged, the defendant came out from her house and at once commenced "tongue tarashing" the plaintiff, calling her, in Hebrew, "red-headed thief," and discharging a perfect volley of very opprobrious epithets against her. The principals and their witnesses spoke but little English, and their statements and counterstatements had to be interpreted; but in their native tongue they rattled off all they knew or imagined of the case with a volubility and impetuosity that all the efforts of the Judge, counsel or officers could not stem or abate as long as they were on the stand. The defendant, an aged but well preserved Jewess, wore the dejected air of the injured one, and in recounting her story she would have the jury believe that it was she who should be appealing to them for damages instead of the plaintiff. That body, however, having been clearly informed of the law in the case by Judge McAdam, found a verdict against her of $150.

GENERAL D. H. HILL ARRESTED BY UNITED STATES FORCES.

[From the Charlotte (N. C.) Observer.]

Rumors were current on the streets yesterday that General D. H. Hill, of the Southern Home, had been arrested in South Carolina for libel. The facts, as we have ascertained them, are that Lieutenant H. H. Benner, of the Eighteenth infantry, stationed at Yorkville, went to Bethel church, in York county, one day last week, to arrest General Hill, he having understood that the General would deliver an address at Bethel on that day. General Hill had no appointment at the place for that occasion, and, besides, was sick in bed at home when Benner went with his posse to arrest him. The alleged libel was certain comments in the Southern Home upon the presentment of the Grand Jury of York of Lieutenant Benner for various offences, and particularly for a gross insult offered by Benner to a daughter of ex-Judge of Probate S. B. Hall.

The articles in question were written, we are informed, by Captain R. A. Shotwell, the associate editor of the Home, who has notified Benner of their authorship and who claims all responsibility in the matter.

Benner is the notorious Ku Klux hunter of whom many of our readers have heard and read.

NAUGHTY MR. FERGUSON.

[From the Fredericksburg News.]

We have received a circular letter from J. C. Ferguson, No. 599 Broadway, New York, offering to sell us counterfeit money. Though his terms are very liberal—only ten cents on the dollar—we most respectfully decline Mr. Ferguson's proposition. He says if we "blow" on him he will find means to be avenged we little dream of. How cruel!

M., and arriving at Saratoga at nine o'clock A. M., for the purpose of supplying the SUNDAY HERALD along the line. Newsdealers and others are notified to send in their orders to the HERALD office as early as possible.

From our reports this morning the probabilities are that the weather to-day will be clear, fresh and cool.

WALL STREET, YESTERDAY.—Stocks were dull, but closed firm. Gold opened and closed as 109⅝ and sold at 109⅝ and 109¼.

FRENCH LITERATURE.—We print this morning some brief but interesting notices of recent productions in French literature. In spite of all her troubles France is intellectually full of activity. The HERALD this morning is a map of the times, and not the least interesting feature is the account of French literature.

SORROWFUL.—A careful writer informs us that about ninety railway companies in the United States have suspended payment of interest on their bonds, and that the total amount of bonds thus dishonored amounts to nearly three hundred and fifty millions of dollars. Is it any wonder that American credit abroad is no better than that of Turkey or Brazil?

THE INDIANS.—It will be seen from our news columns of this morning that the government has adopted, with success, severe measures toward the Indians. Captain Bates' expedition has done good work in Wyoming Territory. This policy must be maintained until the Indians are everywhere taught to comply with law. If the Indians should perish to a man the settlers must be protected.

THE RAIN STORM IN MORAVIA.—According to the correspondence of the London Daily News the damage done by the recent storms in Moravia has been much greater than was at first supposed. Eleven villages and two towns have been devastated. Such is the disorder and confusion, not to speak of suffering, that the government has found it necessary to send troops to relieve the inhabitants. The comet does seem to have brought trouble in its tail.

GENUINE RECONSTRUCTION.—We have no better news from the South than a publication in the Galveston Civilian to the effect that Texas will produce this year between five and six hundred thousand bales of cotton. The editor thinks that as Galveston has a better market than St. Louis and as good a one as New Orleans nine-tenths of the crop will come to its port for shipment. We trust his anticipations may be realized. Texas must become a great State, and it would not surprise us to see her attain a prominence, as a rich, inviting and fertile Commonwealth, as marked as that of California. Texas suffered very little from the war. In fact the war was really a benefit to her, just as it was to California. True reconstruction will come with such crops of cotton as the Civilian reports. The hoe and the plough are of more value now as elements of political renovation than the rifle or the ballot or the Ku Klux mask. This has been learned in Texas, and we wish it could be imitated in the Carolinas and Arkansas.

"A FIRE BOULEVARD."—Chicago, which seems disposed to learn by the experience of two great fires, now proposes to build what is called a fire boulevard. The suggestion, as explained by the Chicago Tribune, is "that a belt of territory of the width of a block, running west from the lake to Ashland avenue, and thence north, should be purchased by the city and set apart as a people's park and boulevard, forming at the same time one of the greatest possible protections against and preventives of the spread of fire that can be devised." Such a boulevard, the Tribune says, will be built in twenty years. It will form a barrier beyond which fire could not extend, and, more than all, the editor adds:—"It will penetrate the most thickly settled portions of the city, giving breathing space and relaxation to multitudes who are now confined to the crowded tenements and narrow streets where they live. In a few years this park, planted with trees, will be not only a place of healthful recreation, but will be an ornament to the city beyond comparison with any other public improvement. In point of necessity as a sanitary measure, and as an all-sufficient barrier against fire, its value is not to be computed in dollars and cents."

Let Us Have the End of It.

We had hoped when we came to this Sabbath, the day of rest, that there would be an end of the one affair which dwells in all men's minds. It is well enough for those extremely proper journalists, whose minds are not of the earth, to inculcate upon us the wisdom of silence as regards the controversy between Mr. Beecher and Mr. Tilton. But no one event has made a deeper impression upon the people since the assassination of Mr. Lincoln. It usurps the newspapers, it burdens the telegraph, it asserts its dominance in every discussion; and in the hearts of the millions who will to-day invoke the mercy and blessings of God there will be a thought for Mr. Beecher and his trials. Some of our rural contemporaries speak in wonder and others in reproach of the attitude of the metropolitan press on this subject. We are told by some that the press has been "subsidized" by the friends of Mr. Beecher. Others are profoundly grateful for the patience and consideration shown to him. Some of our Western friends, who are disposed to mistake brutality for independence, argue that Mr. Tilton must be destroyed and Mr. Beecher saved, no matter at what sacrifice of truth and justice, and that this is the animating purpose of the New York press. When we read these comments we are sometimes disposed to suggest that it would be well for the journalists in New York to subscribe money enough to induce one of these editors of independence and granite virtue to remove here, and be a moritor of journalism, that we might all sit at his feet and learn the secret of those graceful amenities, that modesty, culture and fraternity which are distinguishing traits in the journalism of the Western States.

The truth, so far as the metropolitan press is concerned, is simply that, without any desire to shield Mr. Beecher or do injustice to his antagonist, there has been the wish to give a clergyman of world-wide fame for genius and virtue "the benefit of the doubt" until circumstances no longer admitted of doubt. So long as it was believed that Mr. Beecher had a case, so long as his friends assured us that he was ready and willing to explain every allegation affecting his character as a divine and a teacher of morals, it was our duty to wait. So far as there has been any sympathy in the matter it has gone out towards Mr. Beecher. We feel assured that if we could announce this morning that the trial of the great clergyman was at an end and that he had been found innocent of all blame there would be more joy in every Christian household than this generation has ever seen. For, whatever we may think on points of doctrine or creed, whether we are Protestant or Catholic or without a professed faith, we all see that for nearly forty years Mr. Beecher has been a teacher of morals, and that no clergyman of the time has held so pre-eminently proud a station. If he is to be dismissed from an eminence, due certainly to his genius and industry, and, as we have all along believed, to his virtues, if he is to be dishonored and degraded as a vulgar adulterer, and sent forth like a leper into an angry and shuddering world, it will be a terrible blow to Christianity. There is probably no gentleman in this community who does not earnestly wish for the acquittal of such a man and the avoidance of the misery that his conviction would cause.

For ourselves, we are proud to feel that this sentiment of manly generosity animates the press and public of New York. There would be little to tempt any one to a life of effort and self-denial if in a day, by unfounded accusations, by successful slander or persistent calumny, the results of such a life could be overthrown. In the case of Mr. Beecher there was everything in the character and career of his assailant to add to this feeling of confidence and sympathy. Without wishing to be harsh to Mr. Tilton, and giving him credit for all the noble qualities that excite the admiration of his friends, he has certainly earned a name of unenviable reproach. About Mr. Tilton we are afraid there is but one opinion in this community. Sorrow and sympathy have passed into contempt. We have never seen such a perverse and continued defiance of all the laws of honor, truth and charity as this young man has manifested. It would be a most welcome event to all who believe in the inherent value of human nature if we could accept the theory that he is insane. But such a theory fades away when we see the unusual vigor and ability he has shown in his statements and letters. In these we discover the highest order of literary merit, and we confess it will always be a problem to us how so much talent could be allied to a nature that seems dead to honor, mercy, friendship and love. As Dr. Bacon showed clearly in a conversation with a correspondent, the alleged "provocation" on his part to Mr. Tilton had no existence. There was no motive for the war upon Mr. Beecher but his own cold, deliberate purpose to destroy a man whom he regarded as his enemy. For even if the offence he now charges against Mr. Beecher is true Mr. Tilton condoned it, accepted apology and contrition, and, as a man of honor, could no longer have in it a motive for strife. But he began the strife, and to make the work of destruction as elaborate and cruel as the tortures of the early Spanish Inquisition, and in order that nothing should be wanting in the tragedy, he must add his own hopes and fame, the honor and peace of his wife and the lifelong happiness of his children.

If it were only Mr. Tilton who accused Mr. Beecher this controversy would have been brief. Truly enough, it is nothing this young man could say that would undo the famous clergyman. What the country asks, and what it has never ceased to ask with earnest patience, is, not that Mr. Beecher would deny the charges of Mr. Tilton, but that he would explain his own self-condemning letters. These letters stand in the way of any belief in Mr. Beecher's innocence. We study them and analyze their shades of meaning, and apply all the tests of rhetoric, and construct hypotheses upon which he may be acquitted; but they all fall before the cold voice of reason. Henry Ward Beecher is the only commentator who can explain the meaning of Henry Ward Beecher. Every day of delay in making that explanation only weakens the public confidence in his innocence. It is incredible that this should not have been seen from the beginning! What the country wants is a plain, brief, manly statement, that will tell the truth briefly and so that there shall be no doubt of the truth. What the country sees is a gathering of lawyers, "consultation" after "consultation," one eminent advocate called in after another, a secret, irresponsible tribunal in session, the affectation of extraordinary secrecy, as though the American people were the enemies of Mr. Beecher and anxious for his destruction. Now, with all respect to the Bar, the public mind is not disposed to look with enthusiasm upon any case that requires half dozen lawyers to construct. If Mr. Beecher's statement is of such a character that "the best legal talent" of New York and Brooklyn is necessary to perfect it then it will never satisfy the people. There has never been a time since God made truth-telling the supreme commandment when truth speaking was more necessary than in the case of Mr. Beecher. He knows the truth. No man on this earth knows better how to write or speak it in such a way that it cannot be mistaken. By the truth he must stand or fall. Why, then, does he not speak?

The country grows impatient with this subject, not merely because it is an offence to the moral sense, but because the investigation does not lead to the discovery of the truth. In this, as in all things, the simplest way is the easiest and most direct. If Mr. Tilton wants to establish his case why does he not enter upon some legal proceeding that will enable him to do so? The public wearies of these charges and counter charges. We do not want to hear what one side or the other will say. We revolt from the carrion feast to which Elizabeth Cady Stanton and her flock of ravens are hurrying. We are impatient with the fragmentary "interviews" of eager reporters. Let the matter go into court and not crowd into the papers through columns of silly twaddle. If this is not done then we should be disposed to consider Mr. Beecher as the victim of a conspiracy to blackmail, and advise that Mr. Tilton be arrested for defamation of character. If Mr. Tilton does not bring his suit then Mr. Beecher has no resource but to have him arrested for defamation. It is no longer a church scandal, the quarrel of mutual admiration fanatics and enthusiasts, but a subject affecting society and morals, and interesting to every citizen who cares for the good name of his fellow citizens, and who sees no disturbance of the peace so grave as a controversy like this, which brings sorrow to millions, leads to reproach upon Christianity, destroys faith in human nature and justifies the scorn and contumely of the wicked, who would tell us that in this world there is neither honor, virtue nor charity.

We trust when another Sunday comes we shall have an end of the present suspense and sorrow. If Mr. Beecher is innocent then let that fact be made manifest. If he is guilty we cannot know the sad truth too soon. This suspense and uncertainty is a cruel injustice to him and to all who hope, even against hope, that the truth may bring him a joyous vindication.

Our Special Sunday Train.

The special train to Saratoga and the North, which will carry this morning's edition of the HERALD to the thousands of our readers who are away from home, seems to attract unusual attention throughout the country. It is only, however, a new feature in the history of modern enterprise, and enterprise is only another name for growth and progress. In our modern world of steam and electricity, when the nations seem to come closer together in the realization of that brotherhood which is the dream of philosophers and prophets, the newspaper seems to be the bond of sympathy.

Science, it may be said, has shown us how to make a newspaper the cheapest created article in the world. As an example of workmanship the damp, fresh journal that lies on the breakfast table is the highest type of what capital, industry and skill can produce in the way of cheapness. The needle, the common pin, the steel pen, in their way show a similar result. But it would be far easier for the unskilled person to make a needle, a pin or a pen than to compose a newspaper. In one we see what the perfection of machinery will do in the way of fineness and cheapness of workmanship. But the newspaper represents the achievements of machinery and the results of energy and patient thought combined. For less than the cost of a cigar, a loaf of bread or a cup of coffee, the journalist sells the combined efforts of hundreds of men. To enable him to make his newspaper his ministers go to all quarters of the world. And so perfect has the relation between the true journal and the people become that a great newspaper is no more and no less than a great commonwealth. It has the responsibility and many of the attributes of sovereignty. There is no such power for good or evil as now rests in the hands of the journalist. Every day he scatters his sheets broadcast to the four winds, to fall like seed upon barren and stony as well as upon fertile ground, to bear fruit which may be wheat and may be tares. We do not say that in all cases this labor is honestly, carefully done. We are well aware that thousands of tares are sown every day—slanders, falsehoods, disparagements, reckless statements that bring forth sorrow and heart-burning. But we do feel that every year there is less and less of this, that journalism is becoming more and more a profession, that the true editor feels that he is in some sense a judge, and that it will be woe unto him if he deals unjustly. So that in a moral sense, as a mighty influence acting directly and incessantly upon public opinion, as well as in a social and business sense, as the instrument of news and business affairs, the newspaper takes every day a higher and higher station.

It is in obedience to the duty of our calling—for the HERALD would illy serve its purpose if it did not see duty among its highest aims—that we take pride in enterprises like our special train to Saratoga. It enables us to bind more closely the HERALD and its readers. It makes them feel that although among new scenes and in a brighter, easier and more tranquil life home influences follow them. A summer day, and more especially a Sunday summer day, has more interest to the idling citizen, when he can feel before he begins it that he knows the history of the world, the price of gold and stocks, the marriages and deaths, what Bismarck and the Pope are doing, the President's recreations at Long Branch, the races at Saratoga, what ships have sailed as well as what have come home, the latest news from little Charley Ross; and if he is not of a skipping turn of mind, the latest phase of the painful controversy in Brooklyn. There is no reason why people should not live an intelligent life when away from home; and, as we have said, it is not only our duty but our pride to carry the latest intelligence as swift as steam will warrant, in search of friends wherever friends may be found.

An American Pope.

An ingenious correspondent addresses us a letter, which we print elsewhere, in which he offers us "a radical and equitable solution of the Roman question." The considerations advanced by our correspondent are novel, and certainly deserve attention. He sees in the strifes that now vex the Continent of Europe, the struggles of one nation for supremacy over another, the contest between France and Germany, which dwarfs all other quarrels, and the jealousy which animates the policy of Russia and Austria, the existence of reasons which make it impossible that there should be that absolute freedom in the choice of a Pope that is necessary to the dignity and honor of the Holy See. He sees how these struggling forces, representing the ambition and the pride of the great nations, may make it impossible to choose a Pope who will really be free in the exercise of his high duties and encourage the belief of the Catholic world in his infallibility. For if the dogma of infallibility, upon which so much of the discipline and the influence of the Roman Church now rest, should be successfully assailed it will be a serious blow to the Papacy. Certainly, if a Pope should be elected under duress or by misrepresentation or by force—if, for instance, Bismarck, by some combination with the other Powers, succeed in electing a Pope of his own choosing—no possible argument could make the Catholic world believe in his infallibility. There would come popes and anti-popes, scandals, strifes and grave divisions.

Our correspondent, foreshadowing these difficulties, takes courage from the remarkable declaration of the Pope that in America his power alone is free. From this he argues that the new Pope should come from the United States, and that His Holiness should encourage the probability of the choice by the nomination of an American prelate to the office and dignity of Cardinal. The Liverpool Post, alluding to the chance of such a nomination, does not think it at all impossible, as the Pope is "one of the kindliest men, and that where he can do a favor he is always ready to oblige even a heretic." At the same time the Post sees an obstacle to this appointment in "the political and social creed" of the Americans, which "rather frowns upon titles and dignities." This objection, however, would be overcome by the passion of the Americans "for the ornamental side of society," and that therefore the Pope would be doing the Americans "a real kindness" if he were to "give them a Cardinal." Furthermore, it says that "there are a good many hats now vacant, and as the ornament has lost much of its old value in Europe His Holiness could not do better than send at least one to the United States."

There is an irreverence of tone in these suggestions characteristic of the English mind in dealing with questions affecting other interests than their own, a spirit that pervades some of our English contemporaries in New York, who would introduce into America the spirit of littleness and depreciation which injures the otherwise generous and manly journalism of Great Britain. It is of minor consequence to us who may be Pope. It is an office that derives very little of its importance from the mere man who fills it. Coming down to us from centuries, hedged in by traditions and customs, regarded by millions of souls as the earthly representative of Christ, inherently, perhaps, the most powerful function held by any living man, it would be difficult for any incumbent to depart materially from the laws and customs of past ages. But in the great change which begins to manifest itself in modern society, in that "great crisis" which, according to a mind as subtle as that of Mr. Disraeli, is about to appear in the world, it is of the utmost concern who should be Pope. We see, for instance, the growth of republican sentiment in the older countries. There is not a nation in Europe in which democracy is not a strong and growing influence. The principal antagonism the Catholic Church has received is from the monarchical Powers like Germany. The only country in which the Pope is free is America. The essence of democracy, as His Holiness must see, is absolute independence of Church and State. Why, then, may not some Pope, in the exercise of that infallible wisdom which in the eyes of the faithful is now one of the accepted attributes of the office, see that the dignity and greatness of Catholicism can only be found in a republic? Let such a declaration once be made; let all the tremendous engines of the Papacy—the religious orders, the secular priests and the higher branches of the hierarchy—become the champions of democracy, and how long would monarchy continue in Europe?

Here, then, are the outlines of a new departure in modern political action, the importance of which cannot be exaggerated. Our English contemporaries, whose political vision does not extend beyond Long Branch and the City Hall, may affect to scoff at it. But in any crisis in the world's affairs the Roman Catholic Church must wield transcendent influence. And certainly, with an American prelate in the chair of St. Peter, it would not surprise us to see Catholicism preaching those doctrines of liberty, equality and fraternity which are held by some to be doctrines of revolution and overthrow; but which, when all is said, have never been preached so eloquently by any teacher as Jesus Christ himself when He walked on earth, the leader of poor fishermen, and commanded all men to do unto others what they would have others do unto them.

PICNICS FOR THE POOR.—It will be seen from our columns this morning that the New York public is not flagging in its interest in the poor. The children of the Eleventh ward had a splendid trip to Oriental Grove. The good ship Chicago never had on board a happier crowd; and, thanks to the excellent management of Mr. Williams, the entire affair was a complete success. The Christian public of New York never did a nobler thing than they are now doing in aiding Mr. Williams in carrying out this work. They will all have their reward.

Germany, France and Spain.

Our special despatches from London this morning confirm the news that has been already printed in reference to a misunderstanding between France and Germany so far as Spain is concerned. The Germans, as our readers know, have taken offence at the summary execution of a German correspondent by the troops of Don Carlos. They propose to show their resentment, and, if possible, to punish the offenders. But as a naval campaign against the Carlists, who are intrenched in the rugged, inaccessible hills of Biscay, would be as absurd and impossible a proceeding as a campaign against the Apaches with gunboats, the Berlin government naturally and instinctively turns to France. The French can, if they choose, punish the Carlists, because the frontier is under French control, and has been practically a base of supplies for Don Carlos. Now the Germans insist that because the Carlists have killed a German the French shall punish them. They also give Serrano and his illegal government assurances of sympathy, and urge him to make a demonstration against France, and propose, as a correspondent says, to have the Brussels Conference unite in favor of a general recognition of the Spanish Republic by the European Powers.

This is certainly keen diplomacy! Bismarck's murdered German becomes of great use to him. He has a pretext which he finds convenient, although he does not always pause to find one when he has something to gain. He not only kills one bird with one stone, but has a good chance at a whole flock of them. He humiliates France, which is always a pleasant thing to do. He annoys the legitimists, who believe in the Pope and Don Carlos. He flatters the Spanish rulers, who will deal more strenuously with France now that they have behind them the powerful German Minister. He sows distrust between France and Spain and destroys the natural alliance that sympathy in religion and language and customs would establish. Having alienated Italy on one side of France and Belgium on the other, he now solicits Spain. In the event of another war with Germany an alliance between Prussia and Spain, or even a good understanding, would render a French army necessary to watch the Pyrenees. That, at least, would be one army less to fight—not an unimportant consideration either when the battle really comes.

It is urged that France should recognize Spain, and thus anticipate Bismarck and in some way keep his influence out of Madrid. This may be done. We can well understand how France would resent German influence in Spain. Nothing could be more galling to French pride than the policy which Bismarck has suddenly pressed upon MacMahon, for all the traditions of France since Louis XIV. are opposed to it. There has not been a time within two hundred years when a policy like Bismarck's would not have been followed by a French army over the Rhine. But there will be no war! Poor France has had to submit to affronts far more serious than this Spanish intrigue. Her rulers feel that for this year and many years perhaps their duty is to submit in silence to whatever affront Germany puts upon them. In this they show great wisdom and add another to the already long list of wrongs which, when the time comes, will justify France in resenting, and compelling Germany to undo at the risk of another war. This is our reading of the Spanish-German problem. France means to fight when she is ready, not when Bismarck is ready. Bismarck is very ready now, and so France submits, protests and waits.

Pulpit Topics To-Day.

There is a religiousness about the topics chosen for consideration in the pulpits this day that is not always so apparent. Dr. Deems, who is always on the Gospel track, takes up this morning the subject of conversation—not the frivolous or filthy conversation that so many indulge in and which is condemned in the Scriptures—not that, but conversation that becometh the Gospel of Christ. There can be no question that if such conversation should become largely prevalent among us the tone of society would be greatly improved. And if Dr. Deems can so change or modify the thought of the community in this regard he will render a great service to it. But such change or modification can come mainly, if not only, through a contemplation of Christ in all the characteristics of His varied experience and life. Two of those characteristics will be considered to-day by Dr. Samson, of Harlem—namely, Christ's humility and His greatness—and it will be shown also by the Doctor that the claims of Christ were just, and that Nicodemus recognized them in his conversation with Jesus.

The rejection of Christ and its consequences will be considered this morning by Dr. Fulton, of Brooklyn, who will in the evening elucidate the doctrine of the modern Jezebel and describe its fascination and its peril. What the peculiar doctrine is to which the Doctor may speak must be gathered from the discourse rather than from the Scripture history of that bad woman who was both a covetous person and a murderess, and a good many doctrines or truths might be drawn from her history and character. Dr. D. H. Miller, whose life was so recently jeopardized for his defence of the Bible as a schoolbook, is to speak this morning in support of a free pulpit and a free press.

Dr. McGlynn's lecture in Yonkers, on the "Philosophy and Poetry of the Confessional," will, no doubt, be one well worth listening to, considering the ability of the lecturer and the importance of his theme.

Morton in Indiana.

Mr. Morton is so distinguished a leader in the republican party that when he delivers a speech as carefully prepared as the one he recently made at Terre Haute we naturally look to it for indications of encouragement and instruction to the party. But what do we find? Old issues discussed in a cold, half-hearted way; a good deal about tariff and "the jargon of free trade;" an arraignment of the democracy as the authors of all the misfortunes and sins since the time of Eve; a defence of the Civil Rights bill and an exultant allusion to the policy of the contractionists in the last Congress. "The republican party," he says in the concluding burst of oratory, "has never proved false to any great principle nor cowardly in the presence of any great question." If this were true it would be worthy of the Senator's exultant eloquence. But there are three great questions that cannot be put down, that assert themselves in every section of the country, and will have a dominant influence on the next canvass for the Presidency.

These three questions are the finances, reconstruction and the third term. Let us see how far Senator Morton is false or true to "the great principle" involved in them, or whether he is cowardly in their presence. On the finances he favors inflation, which is only the alphabet of repudiation, and denounces free trade, which is as necessary in time to our greatness as freedom of speech. On reconstruction he says harshly that if the white men in the South complain of the negroes they must remember that the negroes are what they have made them. The misgovernment of the Southern States is not to be compared to the miseries of slavery. In other words, because the white men owned the negroes before the war, the negroes have a right to rob the white men now, and not merely rob them, but bring dishonor to the American name by shameless and frequent acts of repudiation. Upon the third term Mr. Morton is silent. In the presence of the finances he has only a demagogue's proposition that would bring measureless misfortune to the country, and he is "false to the great principle" of national honesty and scrupulous regard for the obligations of the public debt. In the presence of reconstruction he is brutal, and before the third term "cowardly" and silent.

Senator Morton is a distinguished republican, and as brave as any of the leaders in that party. His "cowardice" and silence are only so many new indications that the day of the party usefulness is coming to an end, and that its best and boldest men cannot save it.

The Religious Press Returns to the Brooklyn Scandal.

The religious press having waited a week or two for something to turn up that would give them a better insight to the secrets of this now notorious topic which engrosses the attention of all the people of the land from Maine to Texas, but having waited in vain, they return this week to a consideration of certain lessons which this great trouble may have in it for the benefit of others who may yet stand on slippery places. It is strange how differently the denominational press look at this scandal and how varied are the lessons they draw therefrom. For instance, the Observer reads a sermon to its patrons on the mawkish sentimentality that prevails among religious women toward clergymen. It censures ministers who encourage women to come to them with family matters. It reiterates the thought that the alleged "drawing out of soul" toward a pastor is carnal and of the earth earthy. God is not in it. It is simply the lower nature, the human passion of one creature for another. "It is a travesty of the Gospel," says the Observer, "to hold that this 'yearning after an affinity' which sacrifices the obligation of society, family and honor, is anything even akin to love." It is an insult to every pure emotion to call it by that name. Lust is not love. Love is of God, for God is love, and religion is not a passion, but a principle—an intelligent belief of truth that leads to right doing.

The Evangelist refers to the scandal to show that the pivot on which the whole controversy revolves in the public mind is the reconciliation of Mr. Beecher's humble pie letters to Tilton and Moulton with the theory of perfect innocence. If it were simply a question of veracity between Theodore Tilton and Mr. Beecher and Mrs. Tilton the matter would have been settled by the public verdict long ago in favor of the latter. Even the theory of an unwarranted interference in the domestic affairs of Tilton's household by his pastor, the Evangelist thinks, does not warrant the intensity of language used by Mr. Beecher in these epistles. But the Evangelist takes heart from the darkness of the present hour that it is only the precursor of the day, and hopes that Mr. Beecher will be able fully to explain himself to the public mind and conscience.

The Methodist makes the scandal its text for a discourse on "The Value of Character," and pays the secular press the merited compliment of giving the lie to the charge against it of a disposition to promote scandals against good men, and particularly to cherish those in which clergymen are involved. It cites the almost universal position of the secular press on Mr. Beecher's side as a proof that character is an element of strength to the man who possesses it. It stands him as a defence against irresponsible persons, and commands the forbearance of the public against the one-sided disclosures of responsible men. It receives sympathy in the hour of trial, and is worth working for and living for. It is, therefore, more than ever incumbent on good men to take care of this gem of character.

A few journals treat the matter indifferently or base an assumption of guilt upon Mr. Beecher's correspondence; but there is nothing of particular moment or stirring interest in those journals, Jewish or Christian, local or distant. They look after matters of political or religious or commonplace gossip, which they treat in an ordinary way.

With all his might and main,
He jumped into the same old bush—
But without any improvement to his darkened orbs.

GERMANY AND FRANCE.

Serious Complications Concerning Spanish Affairs.

A DIPLOMATIC RUPTURE THREATENED.

[SPECIAL DESPATCH BY CABLE TO THE HERALD.]

PARIS, August 1, 1874.

I am enabled to inform the HERALD, on confidential authority, which may be relied upon, that serious complications have arisen between Germany and France concerning Spanish affairs, and that a diplomatic rupture between the Powers is threatened.

French Press Arguments in Favor of the Recognition of Spain.

PARIS, August 1, 1874.

The Journal des Débats urges the French government to recognize Spain. It had better act now, says the Journal, than follow the initiative of the Berlin government later. The danger is pointed out of allowing Germany to gain a footing in Spain.

Other journals advise a more friendly attitude towards Spain for similar reasons.

French Opinion of Carlism.

Notwithstanding the late success of the Carlists at Estella and the death of Marshal Concha, the Paris Débats of July 21 cannot see that Don Carlos' cause has made any real way or acquired greater chances of ultimate triumph. The writer says:—

The final issue of the war is no more doubtful to us now than it was before, and our conviction is founded on the fact that the Carlist forces cannot be renewed, while the whole of Spain, with the exception of the Basque Provinces and Navarre, will always send reinforcements on reinforcements and recruits on recruits until the civil war is put down. Bitter complaints have been made, and, in particular, lately again more distinctly, against the partiality which the French authorities on the frontier have shown to the Carlists. It is painful to have to admit that these complaints are not unfounded. It is certain that since the commencement of the war the Carlists have been quite at home on the French frontier; that the French towns are used by them as headquarters and depots; that arms and ammunition are forwarded to them with impunity across French territory, and some of their generals have been seen calmly riding, with a numerous staff and escort, through the towns and highroads of France. There can be no doubt but that the open complicity of our authorities on the frontier has greatly contributed to prolong the war, and that the French government is responsible for this conduct. We cannot be astonished, therefore, if complaints have been made by Spain to the French government. It would be puerile to pretend that the present government of Spain has not been officially recognized. Certainly it is not for us to be so punctilious, and when one is, like our own government, every day seeking a certificate of birth and baptismal register, one ought not to be so difficult. But it is especially in the interest of France that we think it our duty to make these remarks. Europe is beginning to be disquieted, not only by the prolongation of a war which interferes with so many interests, but by the savage and barbarous character given to it by the acts of the Carlists.

The République Française of July 21 says:—"The Spanish Carlists would think they had wasted their time if they allowed twenty-four hours to pass without giving to the world the spectacle of some fresh piece of barbarism."

OBITUARY.

Charles T. Beke, the Explorer.

A cable telegram from London under date of yesterday, August 1, reports as follows:—"It is reported that Charles T. Beke, the explorer, is dead." This report may prove true. Charles Tilstone Beke is seventy-three years of age. He was born in London on the 10th of October, in the year 1800, and was the representative of an ancient family long settled at Bekesbourne, East Kent. He received a commercial education, but subsequently studied law in Lincoln's Inn. Eventually he resumed his mercantile avocation in London and the Mauritius. Having devoted much attention to ancient history, geography, philology and ethnography, he commenced to publish the results of his study in his "Origines Biblicq." His attention was at an early day attracted towards Abyssinia as a centre of great commercial importance, and having the elucidation of his ideas in view, he proceeded to Shoa, in Southern Abyssinia, in the year 1841. Thence he went alone into the interior, where he explored Godjam and the countries lying to the west and south. The results of his travel were published, Beke attaining great distinction as a writer on geographical subjects and the cognate sciences. On the 4th of November, 1865, Dr. Beke, accompanied by Mrs. Beke, left England on a mission, which proved fruitless, to obtain the release of the Abyssinian captives. He received a civil list pension from the English government in the year 1870. After Livingstone his name stands pre-eminently high as an authority in all matters relative to Africa.

BONAPARTIST INSULT TO THE REPUBLIC.

A Scene of Tumult and Violence in the Assembly.

The Bonapartists Ignored on the Permanent Committee.

PARIS, August 1, 1874.

There was a violent scene in the Assembly to-day.

M. Galloni d'Istria, a Bonapartist, yesterday used the expression that "the Republic had succumbed before the scorn of honest men."

To-day he was challenged by members of the Left to repeat the words, which he did.

Thereupon Victor Schoelcher, republican, gave him the lie, and several deputies from the Left rushed toward him shouting and shaking their fists. The President of the Assembly, unable to restore order, suspended the sitting.

It is probable that several duels will follow.

WHY THE BONAPARTISTS ARE ENRAGED.

The Permanent Committee of the Assembly, which is to sit during the recess, has been elected. It is composed of six legitimists, ten members of the Moderate Right and Right Centre and nine of the Left.

The Bonapartists are wholly excluded.

HAVANA, August 1, 1874.

Fifty merchants of this city have entered into an agreement to charge one per cent above regular rates on all shipments and consignments or disbursements on behalf of vessels and on all freights obtained or moneys collected therefor, and one-quarter of one per cent on all bills of exchange negotiated on commission from and after this date, the proceeds of such extra charges to be paid to the government as a contribution towards its maintenance.

THE INDIANS.

Report from Captain Bates' Expedition—An Indian Village Surprised and the Occupants Severely Punished—Bad Conduct of the Indian Allies.

WASHINGTON, August 1, 1874.

The War Department has received a report of the expedition, under the command of Captain A. E. Bates, which left Camp Brown, Wyoming Territory, July 1, for the purpose of punishing the Indians who had been committing depredations in that and the neighboring valley. After several days' marching he reached the Indian village at Owl Creek Mountains, which consisted of 112 lodges, placed in a deep ravine. The Indians opened a sharp fire on the troops as they approached, but without damage, and the troops quickly drove them down through a gulley, where they were crowded so closely together near the lower end that the troops had a splendid chance at them, and counted, after the fight, seventeen dead bodies almost in one heap. In about twenty minutes or half an hour, at farthest, there was not an Indian in the village, excepting the dead and numbers of children, who were left in the lodges. The Indians who escaped had reached the rocks above, where they opened a very telling fire on the troops, killing two men and wounding three in a very few minutes.

THE RESULT OF THE FIGHT

was twenty-five Indians known to be killed, and with the usual proportion of four wounded to one killed, 100 wounded. Of the killed, seventeen were counted in part of the village. The others were left, part in the village and part on the side of the bluff. Had the Shoshones, who accompanied the expedition, kept quiet in the first instance, and given the commander an opportunity to reconnoitre the ground thoroughly so as to take possession of the commanding points, or had they followed Lieutenant Young, who received the orders correctly and attempted to lead them to the attack, Captain Bates would have been able to report the most complete victory one company—B. Second cavalry—ever achieved, for the Captain thinks not half a dozen would have escaped. But owing to the bad conduct of his Indian allies first, and cowardice afterwards, he thinks the troops achieved only about half as much as was intended. To sum up the actions of these Shoshone Indians, they betrayed the troops first and deserted them in the fight. Some of them, however, behaved well.

Movement of Troops—An Unsuccessful Pursuit of Indians.

OMAHA, Neb., August 1, 1874.

Company I, Third cavalry, Lieutenant King commanding, has been ordered from Fort McPherson to join General Pope's command in Kansas, and will march to Grinnell Station, on the Pacific Railroad. The object is to protect the Kansas-Pacific Railroad, which is now in danger from the roving bands of hostile Southern Indians. Captain Wessel's command has come into Fort Steele after an unsuccessful pursuit of the Indians who attacked the Seminate miners, about twenty miles down the Sweetwater.

THE MASSACHUSETTS DEMOCRATS.

The Coming State Convention—Policy of the Party on the Temperance Question.

BOSTON, August 1, 1874.

At a meeting of the Democratic State Central Committee here to-day it was decided to hold the State Convention at Mechanics' Hall, Worcester, September 9. It was voted to issue a call to democratic voters of the State and all others opposed to misrule in the State and national governments.

THE POLICY OF THE PARTY

on the subject of liquor was left to be determined by the committee on resolutions, but it is intimated that the plan of the campaign will embrace the advocacy of a stringent license law in the interest of temperance.

Hon. William Gaston will probably be nominated for Governor.

THE LOUISIANA REPUBLICANS.

NEW ORLEANS, August 1, 1874.

Primary elections for delegates to the Republican State Convention, to be held on the 5th of August, took place here to-day. The main fight was on the chairmanship of the Republican State Central Committee between Pinchback, supported by Collector Casey, United States Senator West and others, and Marshall Packard, the present incumbent, supported by Governor Kellogg and the city Congressional delegates. Packard carried fifteen out of sixteen wards. One ward is doubtful. Pinchback was defeated in his own ward. There was much excitement but no disturbance.

THE STACK-O'HARA CONTROVERSY.

Examination of Experts as to Powers of Bishops and Priests.

WILLIAMSPORT, Pa., August 1, 1874.

The Stack-O'Hara Church controversy will be argued on Wednesday, the 5th inst., before R. P. Allen, recently appointed Master in Chancery for this purpose by the Court. The question at issue is concerning the "expert" testimony taken by the Examiner, and now in print. It is voluminous, comprising more than 200 pages, and opens to view the internal discipline of the Catholic Church, particularly as to the lawful relations of bishops and priests, in contrast with the absolute power claimed by the American bishops. On the side of O'Hara there appear as experts Rev. Dr. Wood, Bishop of Philadelphia; Rev. Dr. Corcoran, theologian of the Vatican Council, and several others. Father Stack appears as an expert in his own case, representing the priesthood.

ROCHEFORT.

[From the Paris Gaulois.]

At a recent performance of "Giroflé-Girofla" in London, Rochefort, accompanied by a stout individual and a young girl, was taking his ease in one of the boxes. As soon as he was recognized a murmur arose, and a loud voice was heard to say, "Turn him out!" "To the door with the murderer!" The words were pronounced by an Englishman and were cheered by the whole house. Rochefort at first endeavored to make head against the storm and answered with a smile, but, in consequence of the general reprobation caused by his presence, he first concealed himself behind the curtain of the box and shortly afterwards left the theatre.

"Rochefort," says the Presse, "is expected at Brussels about the end of this month. He will reside there for the rest of the summer in an apartment taken for him at No. 27 Rue Montagne de la Cour, and will publish his Lanterne regularly."

THE CENTENNIAL OF CHEMISTRY.

Closing Session of the Meeting—The Liebig Memorial—An Adjournment to 1974.

NORTHUMBERLAND, Pa., August 1, 1874.

The Centennial of Chemistry exercises were resumed at half-past nine o'clock A. M. to-day. Professor Smith, of Kentucky, addressed the Congress on the subject of the Liebig memorial and the proposed contribution. He said that two memorials were proposed—one in Munich and one in Giessen—and he hoped the contributions would be liberal; that Americans would take prominence in the work. The subscriptions received amounted to $100, the subscribers indicating the Giessen memorial as their choice. A lengthy essay on American contributions to chemistry was read by Professor Benj. Silliman, of New Haven, Conn.

THE REPORT OF THE FINANCE COMMITTEE

was received and accepted. It was decided that the surplus should be devoted to procure a photographic album, also the autographs of delegates, to be presented to the descendants of Dr. John Priestly as a memorial of this Centennial. The committee appointed to confer with the National Centennial Commission did not desire to report, but asked leave to increase their number. The request was granted.

Resolutions of thanks to the citizens of Northumberland for their warm reception of and bounteous hospitality to the delegates were adopted. A motion to adjourn was unanimously amended "to meet August 1, 1974," and an invitation extended to all present to be in attendance. The Congress then adjourned.

This afternoon an excursion was made to the summit of the Blue Hills, whence there is a magnificent view of the surrounding country.

THE RICHMOND FORGERY CASE.

Livingston Discharged and Ordered to Leave the City Within Twenty-Four Hours.

RICHMOND, Va., August 1, 1874.

Van Ness alias Livingston, arrested here three weeks since on the charge of forging the name of Commodore Vanderbilt to a large amount of paper and attempting to utter the same as true, was to-day discharged, the prosecution failing to get witnesses to appear against him. His family, who have been confined in jail as vagrants, were released and the whole batch ordered to leave the city in twenty-four hours. Van Ness, a few days ago, attempted to commit suicide by hanging, having twisted strips of clothing into a rope and fastened it in a hook in his cell, but was frustrated by timely discovery.

A HIGHWAYMAN'S END.

The McCann Homicide—Verdict of Justifiable Murder.

The inquest on the body of McCann was concluded in Jersey City on Friday night. The jury found a verdict that deceased came to his death by a pistol shot wound inflicted by Thomas Brooks and that said wound was justifiable. Yesterday forenoon the counsel for Brooks applied for his discharge, and the application was granted. Brooks was congratulated by a host of friends. McCann's friends intend to bring the case before the Grand Jury.

THE JERSEY BIGAMY CASE.

In the Court of Oyer and Terminer at Jersey City yesterday morning, James Coughlan, convicted of bigamy, was called up for sentence. Coughlan did not respond, and thus the case rests for the present. Information has been received that he has joined Hamilton, the defaulting Treasurer of Jersey City, in Matamoros.

The Whereabouts of Attorney General Williams.

The anxiety respecting the whereabouts of Attorney General Williams was greater to-day than yesterday. Four ineffectual attempts were made by the Postmaster General to reach him by telegraph, the postal car difficulty requiring the attention of the Attorney General immediately. No one could give his address or even conjecture what had befallen the head of the department of justice.

The Post Office Car Question.

The Postmaster General has recived a despatch from an agent of the Post Office Department stating he had an interview with Mr. Hinckley, who says he will take no definite action on the post office car question until Monday. The controversy between Mr. Hinckley and the Postmaster General stands thus:—Mr. Hinckley informs the department that if the post office cars continue to be used he shall expect increased compensation. The Postmaster General replies that he has no authority to give more than the rates established by law.

The Effort to Complete the Washington Monument.

Letters were forwarded to-day by the Secretary of the Washington Monument Society to all the banks in New York city and Brooklyn, asking for contingent subscriptions towards the completion of that structure. The national banks in Connecticut, Maryland and Virginia had previously been addressed, and have already begun to send forward their contingent contributions. Favorable responses are constantly being received from the various secret bodies, all of which take a deep interest in the success of this final effort to have the monument finished by voluntary contributions of the American people, and thereby preserve its national character. What the society most want now is a general recognition of their effort in the form of prompt subscriptions. They do not ask for large contributions from any, but something from all will be gratefully received, and will render the completion of the monument a fixed fact.

THE SEASIDE CAPITAL.

Morning Exercises and Evening Expectations of Saturday—The Beecher-Tilton Scandal—The Sympathy for Beecher, but the Evidence for Tilton So Far—The President and the Politicians.

LONG BRANCH, August 1, 1874.

August opened here auspiciously. The morning was hot, too hot for life in the city; and throughout the day the arrivals at nearly all the hotels have very considerably exceeded the departures. An immense excursion party came in at eleven from Pennsylvania, and these were discharged at the East End station, the grounds of the East End Hotel, and the house itself being the general rendezvous of excursionists, soldiers and civilians.

THE MORNING EXERCISES

before the bathing hour along the shore are various though somewhat monotonous. At ten o'clock, beginning at the West End Hotel, you will be apt to find there a group of young ladies in the parlor engaged in practising the German, while some of their mammas are encouragingly looking on, and others, as well as the elderly gentlemen who remain down for the day, are absorbed in the latest reports of the Beecher-Tilton scandal. At Howland's also, you will most likely find the German in progress, with some enterprising young gallants disguised as waiters, serving the refreshments. At Lauch's you will be sure to fall in with a group or two of excited Frenchmen discussing the situation in France, with some passing compliments to Spain and Germany. At the other hotels the ladies are mostly preparing for the surf, while the elderly gentlemen, as elsewhere, are engaged in studying the mysteries of the Beecher trouble, as they occasionally pause from the reading of the latest news on the great sensation. At the Mansion House the younger ladies are going through the rehearsal of the Lancers, while their elders are in solemn debate on the awful situation of Mr. Beecher. They are sorry, you know, for Mrs. Tilton, but they are distressed for poor Mr. Beecher—so high and brought so low. As for poor Tilton, he is a marplot, entitled to no sympathy at all. That's clear.

AT THE OCEAN HOTEL

the newspapers are, as elsewhere, the special business of the morning; but in the parlor some amateur singers are giving us a free concert, and of good music and well delivered, too. But never since the war between Germany and France have we seen such a general and thoughtful reading at "the Branch" of the New York dailies, morning and evening, as we have now from day to day, and on every piazza along the shore. We find that even Donald McKay, of the Warm Spring troupe of Indians, has become interested in this Beecher case, while Warm Spring George (no connection of "Live Oak George") thinks "Beecher, big medicine man, in bad fix." Umatilla Jim is "sorry for old Scanocain, but don't know Medicine Man Beecher. Will they swing him like Captain Jack? Bad for medicine man."

THE PREVAILING SYMPATHY

here is for Mr. Beecher; but the weight of the testimony so far is held to be against him. Tilton is regarded as a queer, incomprehensible character, hardly open to the plea, however, of non compos mentis, because there is so much method in his madness. They say that even General Grant is very sorry for Mr. Beecher, and hopes that the truth will fully vindicate him. A shrewd politician thinks it was well that Mr. Beecher adhered to the republican cause in 1872, for that had he bolted to Greeley and Brown, as it was feared at one time he would bolt, it would have been all over with him in 1873. Plymouth Church on a bolt would have crucified him without remorse. We are all waiting for the final verdict on the Beecher case, and all sides are satisfied that it cannot come from Mr. Beecher's select committee.

Such are the morning exercises at the Long Branch hotels. At eleven only the healthiest guests, to improve their health, turn out in groups of bathers; but the fun of the surf which they have at Newport and Cape May, in a general meeting in the breakers from all the hotels, is lost here in these little detachments at different points for a distance of two miles along the shore. The expectations of the evening (the first Saturday evening in August) are large reinforcements from town, and a much needed invasion of enthusiastic beaus to assist in the hop, which is the special order of Saturday night at all the hotels, preparatory for the church discipline of Sunday. The skies are thickening as for a settled rain. "Spare us, dear Old Prob," say these hotel men; "spare us, this time, the disastrous storms of last August, and we shall be devoutly thankful."

THE POLITICAL LOOKOUT.

Senator Morton's recent declarations touching the loyalty of the President to the republican party are believed here to be true. It is further believed that the republican managers resolved to trim their sails to catch the popular wind, from whatever quarter it may blow. For instance, long before the meeting of the New York Republican State Convention in September its platform will be cut and dried, and a visit from Senator Conkling to Long Branch in August will be readily understood. Cheap transportation will be the ticket of the republicans in our fall State elections East and West, and the platform embodied in General Grant's annual message of December, 1872, touching a Niagara ship canal and certain trans-Allegheny canals or railroads, to be undertaken by the general government, will henceforth be the PROGRAMME OF THE REPUBLICAN PARTY.

It was so foreshadowed in the resolutions of the Senate on the subject at the last session of Congress, all of the republicans and the Western democrats voting for the resolutions. Hence the republicans say that our unity and the division of the democrats on cheap transportation (the President being heartily with us and our pioneer) will carry us handsomely through these coming elections.

Meantime the President, at his cottage by the sea, does not appear to care a button as to the probable issues and results of these coming elections. And he is in a position in which he can safely remain in his tent, and let the Greeks against the Trojans do the best they can without him. Still the New York republicans would be grateful if, before the close of the summer season, he would, by way of Utica, take a run to Niagara Falls and return via Lake Champlain, Lake George and Saratoga. And why not?

MUSICAL AND DRAMATIC NOTES.

It is rumored that Albani will be the successor of Nilsson here.

Dodworth's Band will shortly play the new waltz "Nautilus" in Central Park.

Mlle. O. Duhain, a Russian pianist, is rivalling the fame of her compatriot, Mme. Essipoff, in London.

A fine concert will be given this afternoon, at Jones' Wood Colosseum, by Downing's Ninth Regiment Band.

The Central Park Garden concerts increase in interest as the season advances, as Mr. Thomas is quite lavish of novelties.

There were no less than twenty-six prime donne in the Royal Italian Opera Company, Covent Garden, during the season which has just closed.

Mme. Annie Butler leaves to fulfil an engagement in Italy, having been engaged by cable to sing in Rossi's new opera, "Contessi di Monza," at Cremona.

Gye makes his money during the opera season in London principally by the numerous concerts at which some of his artists appear, and for which he is liberally paid. The opera subscription would not suffice to pay his expenses.

Miss Imogene, a young and beautiful Boston lady, of whom report speaks favorably, will soon make her appearance here in a melodrama written expressly for her, strangely entitled "Ingemised." The scene is laid in Paris during the days of the Commune, and the play is said to abound with rich scenic effects.

J. L. Toole will open at Wallack's with one of Albery's plays, written expressly for him. It is said to approach in merit more closely than anything he has written his excellent comedy, "The Two Roses." Miss Eliza Johnstone, Mr. W. Herberte and Mr. Henry Westland, of the principal English theatres, accompany Mr. Toole.

The Olympic Theatre has undergone a complete overhauling and will be one of the pleasantest places of resort in the city during the fall season. An excellent bill of fare has been provided and the 10th of August will see the doors thrown open to the public. "Tony Pastor's Combination," the Fieldings, Nelse Seymour and a host of talent will sustain the reputation of this house as a first class variety theatre.

Messrs. Maurice Gran and C. A. Chizzola will open the Lyceum Theatre on the 24th inst. with Aimée's new opéra bouffe company in "La Timbale d'Argent," by Leon Vasseur, being the first performance of the work in America. The company comprises some of the best artists from the Parisian and provincial theatres, notably Mlles. Leontine Minelly, Gandon and Kid and MM. Dubouchet, De Beer, Genot, Guyot and Leonard. "La Princesse de Trebizonde" and "La Jolie Parfumeuse," both by Offenbach, will be the other novelties of the season.

The Globe Theatre opens Monday with a very strong company, and, judging from the array of names well known to fame as variety artists, the season at the Globe will possess unusual attractions. Sparkling musical burlesques, beautiful ballets, glorious farces, Thespian sketches, character songs and fairy pantomimes are promised in profusion. With such a tempting bill of fare the Globe can scarcely fail to attract a large share of public patronage. It has the honor of opening the dramatic season, and from the vigorous preparations we have no doubt that no effort will be spared by the brilliant company marshalled by Manager Butler to capture public approval.

An extraordinary pictorial novelty, styled "The Deluge; or, Paradise Lost," is being prepared for presentation at Niblo's Garden September 7. It is announced as a Parisian spectacular drama of the allegorical type, depicting all the scenes and incidents of Milton's sublime work. The cast will introduce an entirely new company, expressly imported from London, headed by Miss Julia Seaman, an actress of exalted repute throughout Great Britain. The stage garniture, characteristic costumes, mailed armor, ancient shields and singularly novel effects, in addition to a family of French gymnasts, will constitute only a portion of the attractions of the new play. The Kiralfy Brothers, well known for their Terpsichorean talents and managerial shrewdness, are the originators, importers and directors of the forthcoming Scriptural novelty.

DEATH TO THE DOGS.

Two Hundred Brutes Suffocated at the New Pound Yesterday.

Salutary are the teachings of experience, even in the killing of dogs. If the curs are under the wise provisions of a municipal ordinance to be summarily taken off, it is desirable, both from an economic and a sentimental point of view, that it should be done quickly, that their quietus should be given them quietly and quickly as possible. In the early days of the present campaign there was abundance of blundering and red tape, all of which swelled the amount of suffering by the dogs, whose chief fault was their existence, for which they were not logically blamable, and lengthened their painful trip across the river of death. They were smothered slowly by gas poured into a close tank filled with air for which no escape was provided. So the poor beasts breathed alternately gas and air, varied with a mixture of the two in all possible proportions. They tusseled with death, pounding their prison walls with their legs till their happy release came slowly after the lapse of long, lingering minutes which nearly lengthened into half hours. But time and use have changed all this.

PROGRESS OF SCIENCE IN SLAUGHTER.

Our scientific smotherers have found that carbonic acid gas, like water, being heavier than atmospheric air, can be poured into the fatal tank till it is nearly full before any large portion of it will escape or lose its poisonous efficiency by mingling with the air. So yesterday, when Captain Marriott was to slay 200 of the vagrant whelps confined in the Eighteenth Ward Market building he first poured the gas into the tank and then as the doomed dogs were one by one dropped into it they breathed death at once. In a moment each victim fell senseless to the floor, and two or three minutes after its entering his lungs the poison had completed its work. When the collection of dogs who had been forty-eight hours in the Pound had all been thrown into the tank there was no need of long waiting for the departure of animation. The vital spark and the spiteful bark were alike gone beyond recall within three minutes, and the poor dog had nothing more to fear from the inhumanity of policemen or the fiendish ferocity of the street boy. He had passed from the miseries of canine vagrancy, let us hope, to some happier and more useful sphere of quadrupedal existence.

DANGEROUS DELAY.

At eight o'clock yesterday morning Captain Marriott had completed his fatiguing duty in launching the 200 into the unknown sea. They lay in the poisoned tank stark and stiff. An hour later they should have been transferred to the green painted truck which the Health Department employs as a wholesale hearse for dogs. This was sent for; but even dead wagons wait. So it was after four o'clock before the vehicle arrived to carry the carcasses to the offal scow at Thirty-seventh street, North River. By that time the mass had become so offensive that approach to the tank was a task not willingly attempted. Can it be possible that that reeking load of putrescent matter could be carried across the whole width of the city safely?

MONDAY'S BATCH.

Last night there were left in the Pound nearly 200 howling nuisances. These will be smothered on Monday morning. They are a bad set to look at and most unmusical to hear, and the nearest residents do not like their serenades. Yet the situation is a decided improvement on that of the old Pound, and could hardly be bettered in any quarter of the city. Dogs come in freely each morning. Some of the marshals yesterday brought sixteen and eighteen, each earning $8 or $9. At the present rate the crop will reach 600 per week. Thousands, useless except for the manufacture of gloves, still range the city, frightening citizens, who unanimously hope the good work of slaughter will go on with rapidity and certainty.

The Rabies in Jersey City.

A woman named Mary Sullivan was bitten by a bulldog at No. 371 Newark avenue, Jersey City, last evening. Justice Corrigan sent a constable to despatch the animal.

TURNERS IN BUFFALO.

BUFFALO, August 1, 1874.

Alas, she was a coquette, drawing the men to her side as the magnet draws steel—an artificial. The fairness of her skin was derived from using

GOURAUD'S ORIENTAL CREAM.

The down on her upper lip had been destroyed by GOURAUD'S POUDRE SUBTILE, the glossiness of her ringlets was owing to his CIRCASSIAN GLOSS, while the blush on her cheeks was caused by GOURAUD'S LIQUID ROUGE. LES DEMOISELLES DE RONCAY. By M. A. Second. (Dentu.)

The latest romance of M. Second, entitled "Les Demoiselles de Ronçay," is a charming book, written in the best style of art, with a facile and agreeable pen. The character of Gothille, a crusty and devoted old servant, is admirably drawn, and there is a general tone of quiet humor about the book very refreshing and very rare among French authors. It is to be regretted, however, that M. Second brings most of the creatures of his imagination to a sorrowful death, because, if a writer can find no other way than this out of human trouble, he had better let it alone. We all know that we can die; that which we want to learn is how it may be possible to live, and to live bravely, under such doubts and perplexities as might overwhelm us if we were not supported by good advice and example. Our life has been reasonably called a battle, and there is something cowardly in laying down our arms in the midst of it because we have got a few scratches or an awkward knock in the head. As long as we can stand and think and raise an arm we shall strive on, for we fight in a great cause, against the powers of darkness and evil, often set on high, so that we cannot expect to remain scatheless. If we receive wounds in the struggle we may remember, not without a great hope, that there is one eye which never sleeps and is forever regarding us. We are doing our Creator's work, and if we do it patiently and courageously we shall have our reward. Even the tears and anguish which sometimes make our lot so very bitter are as nothing to the glory which shall be revealed to us, and our worst misfortunes are but the disquiet of a brief slumber which shall be followed by a bright awaking.

Among the other papers which appear in this collection is the pleasing "Sonnette de M. Berlisquin;" but the gem of the volume is "The Marronnier." It is the history of the misadventures of a usurer transformed into a landlord, and it might appear to advantage when compared with some of the scenes where Balzac describes provincial society in France.

"MME. EUGENIO." By Champfleury. (Charpentier.)

The story of "Mme. Engénio" is founded upon that eternal subject which supplies half the booksellers' shelves in all countries where the French language is read and spoken. It is the great fault of English authors that they deal with their characters as if human life was dominated only by the passions of greed and vengeance. Their villains are thieves and murderers, lawyers and detectives; their virtuous characters are disinterested, merciful, and become rich. French authors are wholly engrossed by the crime of adultery, and the numberless manners in which the changes have been rung upon this single theme almost surpass belief. English authors appear entirely to forget that there are men and women who care nothing for money or revenge. There are people by the score and by the hundred who would not walk across the street against their inclination for half Broadway. A railway engineer in eager pursuit of his business once told the Duke of Devonshire that it would add £10,000 a year to his income if he would allow an iron road to go through one of his parks. "I do not want £10,000 a year," answered the Duke, curtly; and so terminated the interview. Then as to vengeance. A wise man never dreams of it, nor a clever woman. A proud man rises superior to it; a dull man is indifferent to it. The desire of wreaking wrath upon an adversary is a feeling only characteristic of the irascible and morose. French authors, who attribute all the good and evil in the world to the wish which every man is supposed to form for his neighbor's wife, are equally oblivious of the facts which are stated with remarkable distinctness by St. Paul. In truth more than half of mankind are not at all disposed to transgress the laws of society for a pretty face; and a prudent young gentleman once summarized the prevailing opinion upon this subject with extreme neatness. "My grapes are sour," said a scornful beauty who had failed to attract him, hoping that the taunt would induce him to commit an act of folly. "Why, no," replied the prudent young man very frankly, "your grapes are not sour, but they are too dear." The fact is that no man who has fortune or reputation to lose is ready to risk them in a divorce court; and if we were all to run about rashly with the intention of committing adultery, as we are said to do in French novels, half the adult male population of the world would be forthwith murdered by incensed husbands. M. Champfleury, the author of "Mme. Eugénio," takes no account of this prosaic statement of the case, and has, therefore, set his mind to work on the old, old story of an improper connection between a married lady and a handsome good-for-nothing. André, the lover of Mme. Eugénio, is a common type of his class, a hot-headed, cold-hearted dunce, who would have found his proper place in society as a hairdresser's apprentice. When he has gratified his vanity by chattering to his acquaintance about the glaring impropriety of which he has been guilty he finds no more amusement in behaving like a scoundrel. Mme. Eugénio, however, having once misconducted herself, would rather be hanged for a sheep than for a lamb; and when she finds that André will not supply her with the sheep required she endeavors to take romantic revenge upon him by condemning him to an eternal regret for the loss of that which never rightly belonged to him. André, upon his part, instead of rejoicing that he is well out of a discreditable scrape, feels, according to M. Champfleury's account—the accuracy of which there is some reason to doubt—as if Mme. Eugénio had cut off one of his legs, and as though he were constantly suffering in the amputated limb. It is a simile rather forcible than elegant; but M. Champfleury must take the responsibility of it. The book is wound up, as usual, by an eloquent homily on the danger of culpable connections.

LE DOCTEUR OX. By M. J. Verne. (Hetzel.)

M. Verne has published another collection of novelettes or short stories, which will add much to his repute as an author. The first and most important of these reprints is entitled "Dr. Ox," and is a scientific squib, extremely gay and amusing. It might have been written by Edgar A. Poe in his best vein of humor, before that splendid imagination and that wonderful insight into hidden things which he possessed drifted away into darkness. "A Drama in the Air" is an emotional account of the voyage of two aëronauts, one of whom is seized with a fit of raging madness while they are above the clouds. "Wintering in the Ice" is a sombre recital of the dangers and sufferings which must be expected by those who follow on the traces of Franklin and Parry. "Dr. Zacharias" is a story which has a grave moral, presented in a fantastic form, with startling freshness and vivacity. It reveals that scientific pride may possibly be the most dangerous and subtle of all temptations to the human intellect. There is a novelty and vigor in the style of M. Verne which no writer in the English language has attained since the time of Daniel De Foe. His tales of the marvellous and incredible have such a simple air of truth about them that they almost beguile one into the belief of the impossible. There is, perhaps, a question whether such an employment of consummate art is not an abuse of power; but it is so welcome a relief to escape, even in fancy, from this sad world of grief and trial that I suppose we ought to be grateful to any one who leads us away from it, even for an hour, to the realms of the unknown. If, on the one hand, it is apt to suggest a doubt of all truth since falsehood can be feigned so well, upon the other it introduces us to misfortunes and miseries greater than ever happened upon earth, and so we may be thankful that mortality is exempt from them. M. Verne's fiction will possibly remind the reader of the story of a person who complained to a crabbed old man of his unhappiness. "Pooh-pooh!" replied he, "you have never had a cancer in your mouth."

HISTOIRE DE JEANNE D'ARC. Par Mme. de Chabauney. (Paris.)

I can hardly say too much in praise of this pleasing and instructive book, which has a purity of thought and a simplicity of diction not often found in the works which profess to relate the touching and romantic narrative of the Maid of Orleans. In expressing my high opinion of the contribution which Mme. de Chabauney has made to French literature I have the happiness to be in accordance with the criticism which has been pronounced upon the book by the famous Bishop of Verdun. He says very truly that Mme. de Chabauney has taught us not only to know, but to love the liberatrix of France. She has shown the warlike virgin adding to military heroism that heroism of virtue which is the summit of spiritual attainments; and it is not improbable that the charming work here under review has been written as a prelude to the canonization of the village girl of Domrémy. The statue of Jeanne d'Arc which has recently been set up in the Place de Rivoli is the object of a popular enthusiasm to which the wise government of the Catholic Church is by no means likely to remain insensible, and it is certain that Ste. Jeanne will have many altars in France, as well as that those altars will be thronged by devout worshippers. The very rails which surround her statue are covered with flowers and immortelles; even the mention of her name kindles the cheeks and brightens the eyes of every French girl. While I was at Orleans last year at her festival the town was crowded by strangers from all parts of France; and when Bishop Dupanloup, the most eminent of the French prelates, delivered an oration in her honor the enthusiasm of the patriot multitudes who thronged to hear it broke out in passionate sobs and cries. Of all the stains which rest upon the fame of Voltaire none have done him so much harm as the insult he offered to his countrywomen in despoiling the tradition of the warrior maid of its beauty and its sanctity.

CHEFS D'ŒUVRE DES CONTEURS FRANCAIS CONTEMPORAINS DE LA FONTAINE. Ch. Louandre. (Charpentier.)

The literature of the seventeenth century still continues to attract considerable attention in France; and Charles Louandre has therefore published a collection of tales and stories belonging to this period under the brave title of "Masterpieces." Some of these narratives are interesting enough, and very little known even to those best acquainted with French book lore. Furetière's "Amour Egaré," and "L'Amour Imprudent" of Ségrais, which possibly inspired Racine with the first idea of "Bajazet," are both deserving of attention. So is the "Nouvelle Portugaise" of Verdier, which might furnish fine materials for a melodrama. It is, perhaps, a pity that M. Louandre has thought it necessary to reproduce the legend of "Tom Thumb," and that he has told it inaccurately; but if his publishers are satisfied it can still be printed at a profit I dare say they have good grounds for their belief. The world never grows quite tired of old stories.

LE DOGME CHRETIEN ET LA PLURALITE DES MONDES HABITES. By the Abbé Pioger.

The object of this book, which is far out of the way of ordinary readers, is to prove that the existence of other worlds than ours has been satisfactorily demonstrated by scientific research, and this is a proposition which few learned men who have deeply examined the subject will feel inclined to dispute. In the first part of his work the Abbé gives an able summary of the most recent discoveries in astronomy, and he observes that one of the most eminent professors of this science is the Rev. Father Secchi, director of the observatory at Rome, which is sufficient to prove that the Catholic Church is not hostile to researches in this direction. In the second part of his work, the Abbé treats with a bold hand the question of the philosophy of religion, and with great logical force refutes the objections to the existence of a plurality of worlds, which are alleged to be founded on the book of Revelation. The Abbé Pioger's work will certainly take a high place in controversial literature, and will be perused with attention by scholars and clergymen in all countries.

LES ORATEURS SACRES DE LA COUR DE LOUIS XIV. By the Abbé Hurel. (Didier.)

This is another work for hard reading. It is the result of deep and conscientious study, guided by a mind of singular strength and intelligence. The Abbé Hurel tells us a great deal about Mascaron, Bossuet, Bourdaloue, Fléchier and Massillon with a clearness and epigrammatic nicety of style which is perhaps only to be attained in French; but the most new and curious chapters of the book are those which introduce us to pulpit orators less generally known to the cursory students of ecclesiastical literature. Thus among those who flourished in the troublous times of the Fronde we find the Franciscan Friar Faure, who is judged with some severity by Abbé Hurel, but who, nevertheless, appears to have been a priest of much discernment, for he remarked that "it would be easier to create a new people than to correct the Parisians of their tendency to irreverence." The discourse pronounced by young Gondi in 1648, on the feast of St. Louis, and of which the Abbé cites several notable passages, reveals an oratorical ability that ought not to have been entirely wasted in civil discords. Pierre de Barbier, Bishop of Montauban, who also flourished in 1657, not only preached a very fine funeral sermon over the sister of Cardinal Mazarin, but must have startled his bigoted contemporaries by lifting up his voice openly in favor of religious toleration. "It is not," said he with a fine courage, "for the revocation of the edict (of Nantes) that I plead to your Majesty. I am far from desiring fire and sword and punishment to be used as arguments for converting heretics. I wish to convert living Frenchmen; to persuade them of religious truth, not to force them into utterances at variance with their convictions."

The Abbé Roquette, whose character is said to have furnished some traits for the "Tartuffe" of Molière, and who was frequently the butt of St. Simon, had evidently some talent as an orator, and the reproach which Boileau affixed to his memory by the assertion that he only delivered the sermons which he had bought is apparently a malicious imputation, resting upon no foundation of truth. His funeral oration over the remains of the Duchesse de Longueville was so eloquent that Louis XIV. forbade it being published. The Abbé Hurel, however, has disinterred a copy of it, and it will repay perusal.

BISMARCK AND KULLMANN.

The Prussian Premier's Examination of the Would-be Assassin.

The Franconian Courier, of July 20, gives the following as an authentic account of Prince Bismarck's interview with the prisoner Kullmann:—

BISMARCK—Why did you wish to kill me?

KULLMANN—On account of the ecclesiastical laws.

BISMARCK—Those laws do not concern you, as everybody is at liberty to believe what he likes. Did you commit this act of your own will?

KULLMANN—No; I have been engaged to do it.

BISMARCK—By whom?

KULLMANN—I shall not tell.

BISMARCK—Is it not sad that a fellow-countryman should have wished to kill me?

KULLMANN—I did it on account of the ecclesiastical laws.

BISMARCK—Did you not think that the consequence of your crime would be to render those laws still more severe?

KULLMANN remained silent.

INGENUITY OF A DISHONEST BOY.

John Golden, an errand boy, in the employ of Morris Opper, No. 764 Broadway, was yesterday sent to the Bank of the Metropolis with a check for $160, drawn to the order of his employer, to deposit. Instead of depositing the check the boy drew the money, and on his way back to the store made an entry in the bank book in imitation of the usual acknowledgment of the receiving teller. Later in the day young Golden was again sent to the same bank with another deposit, and the receiving teller at once detected the forgery. He questioned the boy closely and then sent for his employer. Officer Hathorne, of the Broadway squad, was subsequently called in, who searched Golden and found $99 in his possession. He was taken before Judge Murray, at Jefferson Market, where he pleaded guilty, and was held in $1,000 bail to answer.

THE BROOKLYN CRUISERS.

The Fleet at Vineyard Haven and the Yachtsmen at Oak Bluffs—Something About the Pretty "City by the Sea" and Its Hotels.

MARTHA'S VINEYARD, July 30, 1874.

It was decided last evening, at a meeting of the captains, held on board the flagship Madeleine, that the squadron should remain at Vineyard Haven until Friday morning, and that to-day be taken up with a visit to Cape Poge, trolling for bluefish. This settled, many of the yachtsmen returned to their boats, determining to rest on board for the night, while others, of the kind who are restless upon all occasions and wouldn't be quiet in church, went ashore and were driven over to Oak Bluffs, to note the whirl of the dancers and observe the groups of promenaders at the Sea View House, the "managing" man of which had cajoled the American Band of New Bedford into attending, that the visit of the strangers might be more pleasant. For the first few hours on dry land the time went cheerily by, as many old acquaintances were met and new friendships made; but a squall from the southwest burst upon the patrons of Sea View about nine o'clock, and the day went out about as disagreeably as possible, proving as "dirty" as "Old Prob." has chronicled in many a year. The rain descended and the wind blew and beat upon the Sea View and the docks and the grounds around about until it seemed as if the hotel would be blown away, the docks smashed into kindling wood and the grounds washed out into the very sea. So the yachtsmen ashore did not have so much fun after all, and, for all that, neither those on board; for if it was unpleasant on dry land, it was equally so out in the bay. But the squall had pretty fair manners, and left the people of "the city by the sea," the poetic name of this place, and this morning broke gloriously; the dark clouds had floated away, and the sun, with its golden eye of fabulous fierceness, flamed across the bay and beamed upon the snowy canvas of the yachts, and everybody was happy.

Soon after the fleet had breakfasted, an ancient mariner from Vineyard Haven notified Commodore Voorhis that the half-dozen catboats he had engaged were in readiness to take the fishing party to the grounds off Cape Poge, and in a short time they were filled with earnest disciples of old Izaak Walton, and away they went, skimming out of the harbor for the day's amusement on the ocean. The result of this expedition was very satisfactory, and the fishermen returned in good spirits, though, like all such parties, very hungry and somewhat wet.

The four boats that make repeated trips between Wood's Hole and New Bedford and this place brought large accessions of fair ladies and their escorts this morning, for, somehow or other, the news of the yachtsmen being here had been wafted to them, and while I write there are great crowds about the hotels and the streets, waiting for something—that something, it is whispered, being a hop given at the Sea View in honor of the yachtsmen. If it takes place the fact shall be chronicled later in this short letter.

This Liliputian city is a pretty place and the Sea View House is charmingly situated on the bluff, but to patronize it is very expensive. The European plan has been adopted in the management, which has proven seriously annoying, as everybody does not want to "step up to the captain's office to settle" so soon as they have swallowed their meals. This plan is carried out, notwithstanding the length of time one may remain, and in the case of ladies, who, by the absence of their male protectors, are compelled to dine without an escort, this manner of requiring them to march out of the room with a big check and always having money with them is a bore, not to say a nuisance. The plan must be modified in some way and the exorbitant charges of the Sea View be materially reduced if they want the magnificent hotel, from the balconies of which you can look out upon the broad ocean, to be a success, as the village contains many other hotels where they have some consideration for your pocket book, while what they give you is excellently cooked and nicely served.

As the camp meeting will not be opened until the 24th prox. the majority of the cottages within that enclosure are as yet unoccupied, though painters are at work giving many of them a fresh exterior. Improvements are noticed about the place, and the old camp meeting visitors predict a fair season in both senses—religious and pecuniary.

At noon the Comet, Qui Vive, White Wing and Alice left their anchorage in Vineyard Sound and came around in front of the Sea View, where they won many remarks of admiration from the throng of visitors. The Comet at one o'clock took a party of yachtsmen and friends on board and sailed around to Edgartown, where they went ashore, and, after rambling about a while, returned well pleased with the excursion. Here it may be added that the schooner yacht Alice, owned by Mr. H. L. Aldrich, of Providence, in the race of yesterday, from Newport to West Chop buoy, could not use her centre board, it having become fouled in some manner, and which was not known until after she was under way. In this fix the boat beat from Fort Adams to Brenton's Reef buoy and pluckily continued the contest.

The sloop Kaiser ran into the harbor from New Bedford last evening, to give her owner, Mr. Norris, an opportunity of looking at the squadron, and the number of sail is pleasantly augmented by the arrival of the schooner Robert A. Forsyth, Captain Hubby, from Norwalk, having forty-three of the Neptune Club on board. The Forsyth left the port of her departure on the evening of Monday, at seven o'clock, and anchored in Vineyard Sound on Tuesday evening, at ten o'clock. It is the intention of the club to be absent about ten days, visiting, meanwhile, Edgartown, Nantucket and other places hereabouts. Many of the members are gentlemen of ability and prominence, and all possess an air of respectability and dignity. They wear a uniform the neatness of which can be commended and should be imitated by some of our more pretentious aquatic organizations.

Although it had been announced that the yachts as a squadron would proceed to New Bedford and, possibly, return in a body to Newport, there is no certainty at this writing of the future movements of the fleet, and will not be until the morning. The probability is, however, that the yachts will visit New Bedford, though their number is being sensibly diminished, as the Comet will leave for Boston early in the morning, and during the day the Qui Vive and Sallie intend running down to Nantucket.

The hop is taking place, as the strains of the Bedford band indicate that the hippity-hoppity performance is in progress, and though the gold-banded lads were greeted with ladies of beauty and sense, and with rich attires in the ballroom, the demonstration is decidedly inferior to the reception extended them at Shelter Island, as that was full of earnestness and of zest, as if there were heart in it, while this is too tame for further reference.

The party on the White Wing again treated their friends last evening to a brilliant exhibition of fireworks, which was greatly appreciated. Jolly White Wingers!

Yachting Notes.

Yacht Josephine, N.Y.Y.C., Mr. Phoenix, from New York, passed Whitestone for the eastward.

Yacht Viking (no club), Mr. Hall, from New York for Glen Cove, passed Whitestone yesterday.

Yacht Tarolinta, N.Y.Y.C., Mr. H. A. Kent, from New York, also passed Whitestone yesterday en route for Newport.

BOATING NOTES.

Some of the crews who are to row at Saratoga this month have already arrived at the lake and have commenced practice.

A. Moffat and S. S. Leo, of the Palisade Boat Club of Yonkers, are to row a two-mile straightaway race on Tuesday next.

McCready, of the Athletic Club, thinks he will run down to Providence and "scoop in" the prize for single sculls. Mac has not been doing much rowing this season so far.

Rathborn, of the same club, thinks he will go and do likewise. Rat is pulling well and stands a good chance.

Tom Keator, of the Harlem, is also doing some Providence thinking. Tom is looking and feeling a good deal better than what he did when he pulled at the Harlem regatta.

A good many of the Yonkers boating men are very desirous of seeing a match race between the "fours" of the Vesper and Argonauta clubs. If the Vespers are going to Saratoga the Yonkers people may have their desires satisfied.

Barge rowing on the Harlem is becoming more and more popular. The Nassau and Harlem clubs have barge crews out every evening.

The decorations on the boathouses in honor of Columbia's victory still remain on exhibition. All the clubs sport Columbia's colors for the time being.

The six-oared barge for the Dauntless Club is not yet launched from Kyle's shop. She is promised in a few days, but the few days of a boatbuilder are "something that no fellow can count on."

Pair-oared and double scull gigs with coxswain's seat are to be seen more frequently on the Harlem this season than last.

Frank Kennedy and Louis Rouse, of the Nautilus Club, are going to have another match race. They have had two already, and Frank, although pulling in better form than Louis, managed each time to come in a "good second."

The boat clubs of New Jersey have organized a State association, and intend holding a regatta this fall.

The prospects of a fall regatta on the Harlem by the Harlem Regatta Association begin to look favorable. President Meeker is anxious and the boys are willing to row.

Dick Deeley, it is said, will take Blake's place in the bow of the Atalanta boat. Blake is as good an oar as there is in the Atalanta Club, notwithstanding the change in the crew.

An initial match race in single sculls by members of the Fordham Rowing Club came off on the Passaic River yesterday. The prizes were gold, silver and leather medals.

THE PEEKSKILL SCULLING MATCH.

Ten Eyck the Winner—A Claim of Foul Disallowed.

PEEKSKILL, N. Y., August 1, 1874.

A three-mile sculling match, in Whitehall boats, between James Ten Eyck and Odell Dyckman, both of Peekskill, took place this afternoon during a drenching rain storm. In starting Ten Eyck dropped an oar, but quickly regaining it he soon caught up with Dyckman and passed him, which advantage he held throughout the race, coming in about a boat's length ahead.

A FOUL WAS CLAIMED

by Dyckman, but it was overruled by the Judges, Messrs. Fred. Seymour and John L. Hughes for Ten Eyck and Charles Underwood and John Hait for Dyckman. The referee was Mr. Marshall Lyons. No official time was taken, but the time is given as 28m. 50s.

THE EDWARDS-COLLYER FIGHT.

PITTSBURG, Pa., Aug. 1, 1874.

A large number of sporting men have arrived here expecting to witness the Edwards-Collyer prize fight. Efforts are being made to charter a towboat and steamer for an excursion to the fighting ground, but have so far proved unsuccessful. The fight is expected to take place on the 5th of August, if not sooner.

CREEDMOOR.

The Fifth Match for the Selection of a Team to Shoot the International Match—The Work of the Amateur Rifle Club.

The advent of the fall rains has for the second time interfered with the series of matches which, under the auspices of the Amateur Rifle Club, is being carried out at Creedmoor, for the selection of a team to shoot the international match. The fifth of these contests came off yesterday, and, while the shooting lasted, showed a number of very satisfactory scores. Shooting was commenced about ten o'clock, at the 800 yards range. After the contestants had made their scores of fifteen shots a short rest was taken and the practice then commenced at 900 yards. The fifteen rounds at this distance were finished by half-past three o'clock P. M., when the marksmen went back to the final distance at the 1,000 yards range. But before this was completed a very heavy rain shower, accompanied by thunder—the former lasting through the afternoon—put an end to the match before any of the competitors, excepting Messrs. Conlin and Valentine, had finished their final scores. At the 1,000 yards range Mr. Conlin made 56 points, which would give him an aggregate score of 155 out of a possible 200. Mr. Valentine made 27 points at the 1,000 yard range, which would bring his score up to a total of 87 points. None of the other gentlemen finished their scores.

Until about half-past four o'clock the weather was all that could be wished; cloudy, calm, clear; and excellent work was in progress when the rain came on.

It has been agreed that the remainder of yesterday's work will be finished on Wednesday next, at ten o'clock A. M., when the sixth contest will come off. Some of the competitors who have still to shoot a portion of their score on the fourth match will be allowed to do so any time they may select at either of the contests yet to take place between now and the 12th inst.

FIFTH SCORE FOR THE SELECTION OF AN AMERICAN TEAM.

THE NATIONAL GAME.

The American Players in England.

The advent of the American professional base ball players in England has been the topic of interest among the fraternity in this country during the past week, and considerable curiosity is manifested in regard to the impression made by our ball tossers and the probable result of their visit in extending the popularity of our national game in England. The brief telegrams we have received simply refer to a large attendance on the occasion of the first match in Liverpool, a rainy day deterring hundreds from being present at the second match. Liverpool is the poorest sporting city in England, even cricket failing to flourish there as it does in other places on the island. In fact, we do not expect the tourists to attract any special attention until they have passed the ordeal of a London indorsement, and it would have been better for them, perhaps, to have opened play in the metropolis. The London Sporting Life of July 18 publishes a revised programme of the tour, from which it will be seen that the proposed visits to Paris, Glasgow and Huddersfield, as announced in the original programme, have been abandoned. They play no less than five successive matches in London from August 3 to the 14th, four of which will be cricket contests—eleven English against twenty-two base ball players—including matches at Lord's celebrated ground against the Marylebone Club, at Prince's grounds against a professional eleven, and at the "Oval" against the celebrated Surrey Club, with their professionals to assist them. On the 10th inst. the two base ball nines will give an "exhibition" match at the Crystal Palace grounds. On the 15th they go to Sheffield to play the celebrated Yorkshire eleven at cricket, the strongest county team in England, and on the 20th they play a twenty-two of Manchester in that city. Their last games will be those played in Dublin on August 22, 24 and 25, a rousing reception having been promised them in the Irish capital. The English sporting papers by the last steamer have notices of a copyright work on base ball, written for the English market by Mr. Chadwick, author of the standard works on the game in this country. It has been issued opportunely on the arrival of the American players. No doubt, if the weather is favorable to-morrow in England, there will be a very large attendance at Lord's. No less than fifteen thousand people passed through the gates on the occasion of the recent Harrow and Eton match, and it is safe to presume that half that number will be attracted to witness the American players in an international contest.

The Championship Contests Here.

But little has been done during the past week in professional circles throughout the country, there being a decided lull in the contests in the championship arena in August. In Chicago, on Wednesday last, a grand match was played between the Atlantics, of Brooklyn, and the Chicago White Stockings, for the benefit of Captain Wood of the latter club, who lately had to undergo the operation of amputation of his right leg. The attendance was such as to yield a sum of $2,000 for the bénéficiaire, and the contest proved to be one of the most exciting of the season. Being an "exhibition" game, and not a championship match, it had to be played under the rule of "ten men and ten innings," and this led to an unusually fine display of fielding as well as skilful batting. At the close of the tenth inning the score stood at 4 to 4 only, and another inning had to be played to decide the contest, the final result being the success of the Chicago ten by a score of 5 to 4. In Baltimore, on Wednesday, the "Canary" nine of that city achieved a noteworthy triumph in defeating the Philadelphia nine by the small score of 5 to 1 only, greatly to the chagrin of the visitors, who have been losing ground lately, which they will find it difficult to recover. The Mutuals play in Chicago this next week, and more than ordinary interest is excited in regard to their contests, together from the fact that they are fighting for third position. The following is the official record of the championship contests played up to the close of July.

Amateur Contests.

Rain put a stop to a large number of amateur games arranged to be played yesterday, including the matches between the Fly Away and Arlington clubs at Brooklyn, and the Chelsea and Staten Island clubs at Camp Washington, besides about a dozen games at Prospect and Central parks.

The Halifax Tourney.

The grand cricket tournament to take place at Halifax, N. S., under the patronage of the Governor and the military of the Province, promises to be a grand affair. A very strong team of players are preparing to leave Philadelphia to take part in the matches, and on Wednesday next a preliminary match is to be played at Germantown, between a city eleven and the selected team.

A DELAWARE MAN ROBBED OF $1,500.

Stephen Harding, the owner of a large farm, near Wilmington, Del., left his place on Friday evening for this city to make arrangements for the disposal of several thousand crates of peaches and as many thousand bushels of potatoes. He arrived in Jersey City early yesterday morning, by way of the Pennsylvania Railroad. He had with him when he started a package of greenbacks, the denominations being $20 and $50, the total amounting to $1,500. After spending a few hours in Jersey City he took a boat for the foot of Cortlandt street. Seated next to him was a young man, well dressed, and apparently a gentleman. They engaged in conversation on commonplace subjects until the boat arrived in the slip, when the countryman missed his package of greenbacks. Suspecting that the young man next to him was the thief, he made known his suspicions, at which that individual was inclined to be exceedingly wrothy. This only convinced the countryman that his suspicions had some substantial basis, and he threatened to call an officer if his property was not returned instantly. The young man attempted to leave, but he was held with a firm grip by Mr. Harding. Then another man, apparently an accomplice, put in an appearance, and, pointing under the countryman's seat, asked, "Is that your package?" On looking Mr. Harding found the package containing his money, and accordingly let go his hold of the supposed thief, who fled out of the cabin door and off the boat in the twinkling of an eye, leaving the countryman to gather his scattered wits. A happier mortal than he cannot be conceived of when he discovered that the missing treasure was intact. He thinks that its fortunate recovery was due to the presence of mind he displayed when he threatened arrest. No arrest was made.

A Little More Information Wanted from Secretary Bristow.

GOLD, 109 3-8.

WALL STREET, SATURDAY, August 1—6 P. M.

Stocks opened weak, particularly in the case of C., C. and I. C., which was burdened with a rumor that the company would default on the interest of its second mortgage bonds. Before noon, however, there was a recovery, and an advance of ¾ to 1⅛ per cent was registered, which was well sustained at the second call, the principal dealings being in C., C. and I. C., Union Pacific, Lake Shore and Western Union. The stiffness shown here governed subsequent dealings, stocks during the latest hours of business being quiet, and, while vibrating within a margin of ⅛ to ⅜ per cent, closing firm in tone at generally the best prices of the day. The total sales to-day were nearly 45,000 shares, Union Pacific leading the list. This is getting to be a very active stock. The subjoined table shows the sales of the various shares, as well as at 109⅜, sold at 109½ and 109¼ and closed at the opening price. Of course the syndicate operations were credited with this result, but how far they are responsible it is difficult to determine. It is reported that the Secretary is going to sell $10,000,000 gold this month in order to help the syndicate out, even on their reduced bid of $15,000,000 firm; but we forbear criticism in this regard until Mr. Bristow has had an opportunity to set himself right before the American people on this whole loan business. If Mr. Bristow is checked in making this exposition he might find a larger measure of usefulness in resigning than retaining his present position. The third term may spring from such unhealthy soil, but certainly can never become more than a mere miasmatic exhalation. The carrying rates to-day ranged from ⅛ to 1 per cent; borrowing flat. The customs receipts were $265,000. The specie shipment to Europe to-day was $460,000, of which $385,000 was gold coin and the balance silver. The specie shipment for the week was $1,248,245, of which $772,577 was gold coin and bars and the remainder silver coin and bars. The Sub-Treasurer paid out to-day $900,000 gold coin for interest and $50,000 in redemption of five-twenty bonds.

MONEY

continues at 2 to 2½ per cent for call loans, prime mercantile paper 5 to 5½ per cent for short date and 6 to 7 per cent for 4 to 6 months' date. The internal revenue receipts to-day were $355,000. The national bank notes received for redemption amounted to $450,000. The total expenditures of the government for the fiscal year ending June 13 were $287,133,000. The public debt statement for July shows a reduction in the debt of $1,283,000. The amount of bullion withdrawn from the Bank of England to-day was £10,000.

THE BANK STATEMENT.

The principal changes in the bank statement are a gain of $2,104,100 in legal tenders and a decrease of $2,155,500 in loans. The specie average has fallen off $1,353,000, so that the gain in the total reserve is $751,100. The new law requires a reserve of $60,685,325, and the banks hold $91,112,600 or $30,427,275 in excess. Last week the excess was $29,283,175, so that there has been a net gain in strength of $1,144,100. The following is a comparison of the averages for the last two weeks:—

DEFAULTS.

The International Railway Company of Texas to-day defaulted on their convertible bonds. The reason assigned is the refusal of the State to pay over to the company $2,000,000 which it owes.

The Chicago, Columbus and Indiana Central Railroad defaulted on a portion of its second mortgage bonds, concerning which we find the following statement in an evening paper:—"With reference to the interest due on the bonds of the Chicago, Columbus and Indiana Central Railroad, it now transpires, as we learn by application at the St. Nicholas Bank, that the only second mortgage coupons which are payable are those of the Columbus and Indianapolis branch, which are guaranteed. The company are paying the consolidated first mortgage coupons and first mortgage coupons of the individual road, which go to make up the whole road. The total issue of the latter bonds does not exceed $15,000,000."

SINKING FUND BONDS of the UNION PACIFIC RAILROAD.
PRINCIPAL PAYABLE IN GOLD, IN 20 YEARS; INTEREST 8 PER CENT IN CURRENCY, OR 7 PER CENT IN STERLING MONEY.
THESE BONDS ARE ISSUED TO RETIRE THE OUTSTANDING INCOME BONDS, OR TO FUND OTHER INDEBTEDNESS OF THE COMPANY.
They are a Second Mortgage on the entire unsold Lands of the Road, now amounting to OVER 11,000,000 ACRES;
and will be a first lien on the lands when the $10,400,000 land grant bonds (one-half of which is already provided for) are retired. The further sale of 1,250,000 acres, at prices heretofore realized, would cancel the now remaining balance of land grant bonds, when this bond would become a first mortgage on nearly 10,000,000 acres, the value of which is much more than sufficient to cover the entire issue of sinking fund bonds; besides which, these bonds are a mortgage on the road, its franchises and equipment, subject to the first mortgage and the government lien.
One per cent of the bonds withdrawn annually and redeemed at par.
The sinking fund bonds are offered in exchange for the outstanding income bonds at the rate of six of the new bonds for five of the incomes, which, considering that the latter are not mortgage bonds, is a very advantageous change for investment.
Exchanges can now be made or information obtained at the

MUNICIPAL AFFAIRS.

A Day of Joy in the Departments.

City Chamberlain Lane was busy yesterday paying the quarterly interest on city stock and bonds due August 1. The total amount of interest paid was $337,164 75. The Comptroller paid yesterday most of the departments for the month of July. The following were the lucky ones who received their warrants upon the Merchants' National Bank:—Charities and Correction, Bureau of Arrears, Health Department, City Record, Bureau of Markets, City Revenue, Corporation Counsel's office, Finance Department, Auditing Bureau, Boards of Aldermen and Assistant Aldermen, Collection of Taxes, Mayor's office, Bureau of Permits, Chamberlain's office, County Buildings and Court of General Sessions. The money for the police was deposited with a bank several days ago, so that the police might be promptly paid on the 1st instead of the 8th or 9th, as it used to be. The total amount of the warrants drawn by the Comptroller yesterday and signed by the Mayor was $650,000. The remainder of the departments, courts, &c., will be paid next Monday. The Department of Works, of course, will be as usual the last to receive pay, owing to Mr. Green's passionate love for Mr. Van Nort.

THE DISGRACEFUL CONDITION OF THE UPPER PART OF BROADWAY.

The Board of Assistant Aldermen having passed a resolution requesting Commissioner Van Nort to inform them of the cause of the frequent stoppages of the work of paving Broadway, from Thirty-second to Fifty-ninth street, the Commissioner has replied by the following letter:—

DEPARTMENT OF PUBLIC WORKS, NEW YORK, July 30, 1874.

TO THE HONORABLE THE BOARD OF ASSISTANT ALDERMEN:—

GENTLEMEN—In reply to the resolution adopted by your honorable Board on the 27th inst. requesting me to inform you as to the cause of the frequent stoppages of the work of paving Broadway, from Thirty-second to Fifty-ninth street, I have the honor to report that the work has been twice suspended on account of the delays of the Finance Department in paying the moneys due the contractor. The obligation of the city under the contract is to pay the contractor monthly, upon the certificate and requisition of this department, seventy per cent of the amount of work done, and the remaining thirty per cent in thirty days from the completion and acceptance of the work. On the failure of the city to meet this obligation with reasonable promptitude the contractor has the right to suspend, or, if he choose, to abandon the work and to hold the city liable for all damages accruing to him from the delays or failure of payments.

On the 5th of June last this department transmitted to the Finance Department its first certificate and requisition for work done under this contract, the seventy per cent payment on which amounted to $5,558 88. On the 17th of June the contractor had not yet received his money, and suspended the work. Within two days after the suspension payment was made by the Finance Department and the work was resumed. The second certificate and requisition for the seventy per cent payment was transmitted to the Finance Department on the 11th inst., and has not yet been honored, wherefore the work has again been suspended since the 25th inst. The complaints received by this department from property owners on the line of the work and from others of the inconvenience caused by these delays are frequent and urgent. In several places the street is in a dangerous condition, and if any accident occurs the city is liable for damages.

It is but justice to the contractor to say that he has otherwise prosecuted the work with commendable vigor, and has proved his readiness to comply with the requirements of the contract and the directions of this department. Very respectfully,

GEORGE M. VAN NORT, Commissioner of Public Works.

City Hall Jottings.

Alderman Morris left yesterday afternoon for Saratoga. He says the drowning apparatus at the new pound will not be ready till the end of next week. He still insists that the new pound is a perfect elysium for the curs.

The Mayor joined yesterday a young and blooming German couple in the holy bonds of matrimony, and, as is his wont, congratulated them after the ceremony was over and wished them a happy future.

Mr. Benneville, Private Secretary of the Mayor, has dismissed the complaint against City Marshal Frost, and also exonerated Mr. Pettinger, the auctioneer, against whom a charge of extortion had been preferred.

Commissioner Stebbins and Comptroller Green had a cosey chat yesterday afternoon at the Comptroller's office about the troubles in the Park Department. Mr. Stebbins says that Mr. Stewart has signed the payroll of the Park Department under certain reservations.

Marshal Conklin issued 194 licenses during the past week and received $549.

It is understood that Mr. Shields, ex-Deputy Sheriff, of Genet notoriety, is a candidate for the office of City Marshal. Mr. Maloney, Clerk of the Board of Assistant Aldermen, is pressing his claims.

Two assistants in the Bureau of Permits—Folk and Ganion—were dismissed yesterday by the Mayor, owing to the decided decrease in the receipts of the bureau. The new ordinance will greatly diminish the revenue of the bureau. Last week it was only $210, while formerly it was $200 or $300 a day.

Alderman Lysaght returned yesterday from Europe, looking hale and hearty. He says that in all his travels in the old country he has not seen so intellectual a Board of Aldermen as is the one New York can boast of.

It is now authoritatively stated that Mayor Havemeyer will under no circumstances accept the next Tammany nomination for Mayor. The negotiations which were pending for some time have fallen through.

No Governor in Town.

It was reported yesterday around the City Hall that Governor Dix had arrived in town to consult Thurlow Weed about the yet unsigned bills passed by the last Legislature, and Mayor Havemeyer about his own business, as distinct from that of the municipality, and do various other deeds of great moment; but a HERALD investigator enabled himself to inform the public that this city had to get along yesterday as best it could without the presence of General John A. Dix.

MINNESOTA CROPS.

[From the Waterloo (Iowa) Reporter.]

The crop reports from all portions of Minnesota show that the grasshoppers have undoubtedly destroyed 1,500,000 bushels of wheat and are liable to destroy another 500,000 bushels. Allowing for the grasshoppers' destruction the whole crop will not be as good as last year. In the northern part of the State the weather has been favorable, with plenty of rain. In the southern part moisture has been scarce, while very fervent heat has been the rule. The yield in the northern part of the State will be good, probably fully up to the average, unless the weather of the next ten days prove unpropitious, while in the southern portion harvesting has commenced or will soon commence, with generally light yield of all grain crops. It is too soon to make a close estimate of the wheat yield. Compared with last year, allowing for grasshopper devastation in southern and western counties and for diminished yield from drouth, the surplus wheat crop of the State may be roughly estimated at 22,000,000 to 25,000,000 bushels. Barley, rye and oats promise well, although barley is somewhat shrunken in the lower counties. Potatoes are abundant, with no complaint, so far, of potato bugs. The season has been excellent for hay in that region. Cattle are moderately cheap.

THE PEACH SEASON.

The Wilmington Commercial says:—For the past ten days scattering crates of peaches have been gathered up at the stations along the Delaware Railroad and freighted to New York and Philadelphia, but it was not until Monday last that the shipments by the car load began. On that day the first extra peach train was put upon the road, and it brought up forty-nine cars, thirty-three of which went to Jersey City and sixteen to Philadelphia. As compared with last year, when the season was late, the first train being put upon the road on the 4th of August, the opening shipments this year are in excess nineteen car loads, and nine greater than the first regular shipments of 1872.

The prices obtained vary with the quality of the fruit, some bringing as much as $7 per crate and some as low as $2. All depends upon the quality, but it is very probable that, considering its scarcity this season, there will be no complaints of gluts, and good prices will be realized until the close of the shipments. The fruit will be greatly promoted in value of the experiment of some of the growers in former years, viz.:—The assortment of fruit is generally practised this season, separating the best quality from the inferior and sending them into the market in separate crates or baskets. A greater amount of money may in this way be realized from the crop, and its very shortness be made an element of profit.

THE CHILD STEALERS.

The Kidnappers of Charley Ross Still Uncaptured.

STRANGE AND STARTLING SURMISES.

Our Correspondent's Theories Accepted by the Philadelphia Police.

WEST BY THE ALLENTOWN LINE.

PHILADELPHIA, August 1, 1874.

Although poor little Charley Ross has not yet been returned to his parents and that much hope for result is apparently just as far off as ever, yet I am glad to be able to state that much of the mystery regarding the case is gradually disappearing. The police now accept it as a fact that the child left this city on the evening of the day of his capture on a western bound train, and, after stopping in Harrisburg a short time, proceeded to Pittsburg. Finding that no general excitement followed, the custodian of the child started east again after a few days. It is clearly established, I may say, that the boy left this city, either temporarily or permanently, under the charge of only one man. Carefully avoiding Philadelphia the same mysterious man and child were seen at Harrisburg again on the 6th; at Reading on the morning of the 7th; at East Penn Junction in the forenoon of the 8th, 9th or 10th, and at Allentown on the afternoon of the same day as they appeared in East Penn. This date cannot be positively settled, although the bulk of testimony is in favor of the 10th of July, as I stated in my letter from Allentown yesterday. Everywhere the traces of the boy are clearly defined. The stories, whether from Harrisburg, Reading, Allentown or Mauch Chunk, are nearly enough alike to show that the same child was seen in these places, and yet not so parrot-like as to give rise to a suspicion of a stock narrative. In all cases the details differ somewhat; but the general descriptions of the child and his keeper correspond.

HAS THE BUGGY BEEN FOUND?

The theory which I worked up in two of my letters early last week, regarding the identity of the "mysterious" buggy, seems to have since borne fruit, although it has been carefully kept back from the HERALD correspondent until this morning. The belief which led me to spend two whole days in the neighborhood of Richmond and Palmer streets was simply this:—Possibly there might be a third party in the case, a person who employed the two villains to bring the child, or, as Mrs. Ross thinks, the two children, to him. At any rate, the driver of that buggy would naturally go either in a general direction toward the place at which the horse was hired, or the place of temporary concealment, or the point of meeting with a third party. All these places might very naturally have been near together. In the first place it would not be safe to rely upon the child's walking any great distance and they certainly would not take him into a street car. One man would probably be expected to return the buggy, while the other took care of the child. For choice of this duty they probably drew lots, for one was somewhat more hazardous than the other. These and many other minor thoughts suggested themselves to my mind. After long search, with the assistance of Mr. Peacock, who entered heartily into the theory, I found on Robeson street a vehicle which resembled the description of the buggy. It was true the stable boy gave a partial history of the conveyance, but we were not satisfied, and I gave the statement on Tuesday or Wednesday last, hoping that the police would go more thoroughly into the matter.

NEW COMPLICATIONS.

Now comes the sequel. One of the most experienced officers of the Central Office states that the buggy which I described is believed by the police to be the identical one that carried the Ross children and the kidnappers. Be it understood I give it wholly on the authority of this officer alone. I hesitate about giving his name only on account of the personal injury it might do him. If this be true, then, and the police have satisfied themselves of the correctness of this conclusion, it is obvious that for the past forty-eight hours they have been working on an entirely new clew. The conclusive evidence in the investigations at Allentown goes to show that the child has gone out of the hands of his original captors. The theory that the men in the buggy were merely employed to do the job by some third party, and that after the child was handed over and the fee received these men washed their hands of the whole matter, must now hold. Practically speaking, the job was done after a poor fashion all through, and, if no hidden causes exist for secrecy, this is probably the chief reason that there are no tracks left behind. A scientific job always shows the work of a master hand. These men have evidently blundered into a good plan, and they have stuck to it resolutely.

TWO OR THREE MEN?

Some who have given this case close attention express the opinion that the men who took the children were not the persons who were previously seen by Dr. Walker and Mrs. Ross. This involves the complicity of two other persons in the plot, which I am inclined to doubt. In one way or another such men so employed have had too many temptations placed before them to turn State's evidence. They could not have been chargeable with the kidnapping if they devoted their time only to studying the habits of the boys. They will have taken the best care to establish an alibi, and would have put in an appearance before this time, if ever. The strange stories floating about which give rise to all sorts of rumors regarding the identity of this third party would be worth recording were they based on any foundation except idle rumor. Whether he be a desperate creditor, a disappointed lover, or a mercenary villain whose only incentive to the act is his love of gold, I do not profess to be able to judge. The chances of the villain satisfying his desire for the money grows slimmer every day, and had there not been some deeper, more deadly motive, it is certain that the man would have tried to "cash in" the boy before now. The statement by Walter Ross that one of the men was known to his parents adds additional mystery to the case. This the boy told to the man who returned him home, and he made the same statement to me. More than this cannot be known, and it is possible for the boy to be mistaken.

IS THE CHILD IN NEW YORK?

Some hold to the theory that the child is now in New York. The disappearance of the boy, now supposed to be Charley Ross, after leaving Mauch Chunk and the thorough scouring of the adjacent country leaves it highly probable that the party went down the Central New Jersey Railroad to the metropolis. The man did not seem to be actuated by any definite plan, and on going up to Mauch Chunk the mere sight of a New York train at the depot may have suggested the trip thither. Bill Sykes, after he had killed poor Nancy, was no more the creature of whim and caprice than the man appeared to be who had the child at Allentown. If he were "the third party" or one of the two "first parties" in this terrible crime of child stealing, then we see that he too was pursued with the curse of conscience, which is seldom seen to affect the hardened criminal.

Charley Ross Out West—Story of a Harrisburg Detective—A Real Clew at Last—Facts and Theories—Probable Whereabouts of the Abductors.

HARRISBURG, August 1, 1874.

The great interest felt in the Ross abduction case here has put everybody on the hunt, and whatever theories are advanced are promptly attended to by officers of the law, conductors and citizens generally. Among the officers who have been operating hereabouts is a detective of considerable skill and experience, who has taken the liveliest interest in the matter up to the present time, and whose statement I am allowed to give exclusively in the NEW YORK HERALD, less only some points which the Philadelphia police have requested him not to divulge, possibly to cover up some of their shortcomings.

The officer's story is substantially as follows:—About the 10th of last month a large man, with dark beard, a stranger and apparently from the wilds of the West, appeared in Allentown, dusty and apparently weary with travelling, having in his charge a little boy about four years old, with light hair, remarkably intelligent and evidently ill at ease. For this child the man purchased a suit of clothing, and then passed out of the city, taking the cars for Reading, and remarking that he was bound West with his son and had a very long journey before him.

At Reading he observed some movements which excited his suspicion, and he remained in that city all night. On the 11th he was accosted by an officer, who was already in search of the child stealers, and he was asked his business in that part of the country. He replied that he was a drover from Texas, and had just been to Philadelphia to arrange for some sales. He was watched after this, and during the day the officer was approached by another man, and the two got into conversation, during which the man assured the officer that the suspected person was a drover, he thought, from Indiana; that he had frequently seen him, and was quite familiar with him.

This threw the officer off his guard, and on the afternoon of the 12th the suspected party took the train for this city, where he arrived with the little boy in charge. Here he became alarmed at the reports then in circulation regarding the movements in progress to capture the abductors, and it is believed that he hesitated in regard to the road he would take for escape. He finally took the cars for the West, and all trace was lost of him for some hours.

In going through the cars beyond Altoona the man and little boy were noticed by an employé of the Pennsylvania Railroad Company. The child was very fretful, and the man appeared to be greatly bothered to pacify it. At Pittsburg the suspected man was last seen, and he was still bound West.

My informant is confident that this was the veritable abductor of Charley Ross, and his theory of the whole affair is that he is a Western gentleman of means who is childless and who has taken this mode of securing a son and heir. He does not suppose that this man did the kidnapping himself. He may have employed other persons to do it and paid them for their services, but his actions show plainly that he knew how the boy was obtained.

My informant believes that this man has taken the Ross child to the far West, and that he will return no more forever. He also thinks that the abductors kept the child in Philadelphia as long as they deemed it to be safe, in the hope of getting the tremendous ransom they demanded from Mr. Ross. He thinks that then they allowed the child to be taken away upon condition that should they be able to get the ransom money they could at any time secure possession of the child by simply returning what the Western man had paid them, with liberal allowance for expenses, &c., and the promise of another child.

Of course this is all theory; but it obtains much force when we remember that the child stealers are much more safe while hiding in Philadelphia than while travelling through a country the residents of which actually suspect every stranger who arrives of being a kidnapper.

At any rate my informant is confident that Little Charley Ross has gone West with the party alluded to, and he says he is sustained in this opinion by the Philadelphia detectives and the relatives of the child. He sees in this a reason for the fact that no one has come forward to claim the rewards offered or obtainable with immunity from arrest, but he cannot understand why the cupidity of some one has not led to an application for the reward of Detective Taggart of $2,500 for a clew.

One of Mr. Taggart's officers is now in the West on what he hopes is a trail, but the child and its keeper have such a start of him that there is very little hope of success.

The Latest Developments in Philadelphia—The Detectives' Operations—The Sentiment of the Mothers of the Country—Interview with Lieutenant Crout—The "Jaded Horses" Clew.

PHILADELPHIA, August 1, 1874.

The latest development in the Ross case is in the form of a mysterious advertisement, reading, in one of the daily journals, as follows:—

I WILL COME TO YOUR TERMS.
JOSH-TAGGART.

As the party who signs this advertisement is a veteran detective, I am somewhat at a loss to understand what it means. Upon first sight it seems to indicate that the kidnappers have made, in writing, a proposition to Mr. Taggart, which he answers as above; but when I recall the fact that hitherto all correspondence coming from the thieves, has been addressed directly to the father, I regard the advertisement as the means that Taggart is making use of to direct each communication hereafter to himself. I am convinced that this latter reflection is correct, from the fact that directly under the advertisement quoted above is another one, written thus:—

$5,000 REWARD WILL BE PAID BY US TO any person who will give us a clew which will lead to the detection of the kidnappers of Charley Brewster Ross; and the name of the person giving us the information shall be kept secret if desired.
JOSHUA TAGGART,
ED. G. CARLIN,
R. A. LUKENS,
Pennsylvania Detective Bureau, southwest corner of Sixth and Spruce streets, Philadelphia.

A few days ago the Pennsylvania Detective Bureau, which really has all the first class business of the city, inserted an advertisement similar to the above, though the reward offered at that time was only one-half as great. Taking the advertisements together their united

OBJECT SEEMS TO BE,

First—To institute an immediate correspondence between Joshua Taggart and the kidnappers.

Second—To establish communication between the bureau, of which Taggart is the head, and the people at large.

Whatever may be the doubts entertained concerning the former of these propositions, the latter one is strictly true. Joshua Taggart has already received numerous letters advancing different theories, and announces himself willing to follow any sensible advice, no matter from what direction he shall receive it. I believe a more interesting chapter was never afforded the general reading public than that which the simple reproduction of these letters would give. Some are rudely formed, nonsensical, ridiculous, and some are, on account of the theories propounded in them, remarkably quaint and curious. Others, still, from mothers who, deepest of all, appreciate the woe and wretchedness of that Germantown household, are sweet, tender and pathetic.

A FEW EXTRACTS.

"I kneel at the bedside of my own sick child," says a letter directed to one of the officers, "that I may pray for that other child, whose absence is more to its mother than my child's death could be to me."

"I never retire at night," says another letter, "without praying that before daylight dawns the lost one will be returned to its home."

"I too have had my sorrows," writes still another mother. "My four-year-old was taken from me, not through the deep, inhuman cruelty of man, but through the all wise and benificent providence of God. I arise from an empty crib, and throwing aside that personal grief which almost crushes me to the dust, I approach that Germantown mother and say to her 'Sister, my grief is hard to bear, but yours is deeper, more hopeless than mine. When I think of yours, mine is forgotten, and, kneeling beside you I pray that the return of your loved one may leave me free to go back to my empty cot, and deplore the loss of my own.'"

Thus they run on, until taken together they seem to me to be the sweetest, purest and most sacred letters ever penned. Indeed, it really seems that the agony of this one Philadelphia mother has reached the heart of every other mother in the land.

THE ALLENTOWN CLEW.

The HERALD's correspondence from Allentown this morning has created unusual comment, and in the Philadelphia afternoon papers has been generally reproduced. As if to corroborate it the Allentown Chronicle simultaneously publishes the following:—

The suspected party passed through Allentown on the 7th of July. Here the child's curls were cut off by "Fancy Bill," and a dress was made for him at Mrs. Guldin's, and parties there were informed voluntarily by the man that the reason the boy looked so shabby was because they had come two thousand miles and the mother had not had time to dress him before he left home.

Simultaneously also Forney's Press makes the following announcement:—

The trail which the statement relative to the abductors passing through Allentown would seem to give is being followed up closely. It is looked forward to by the detectives as the one which may in the end reveal the mystery.

But by far the most conclusive testimony that the HERALD correspondent in the interior is on the correct trail is furnished by the statement of Mr. Ross himself. As soon as the HERALD correspondent at Allentown had made a careful survey of the situation he communicated with your Philadelphia correspondent by telegraph, giving an accurate description of the child's dress as well as of his marked peculiarities. Immediately upon receipt of this I hastened to Mr. Ross, and he informed me that beyond all doubt the child which passed through Allentown at the specified date was their own Charley. Here again is seen the stupid incompetency of the Philadelphia detective police. Had they communicated with Allentown, with Reading, with Harrisburg and with every other prominent city of the State and of the country, as they should have done, immediately after they heard of the kidnapping, that very child which passed through Allentown would have aroused suspicion, and the party who had him in charge would have been detained until Mr. Ross and his friends could have arrived. But the telegraph was not used; the press was muzzled; the news of the developments of the case was kept strictly secret; the people of Allentown knew nothing of it; and thus it was that a child with soiled garments and matted hair could roll on the porch of a leading hotel and cry "Mamma, mamma, mamma," without the people interfering with those who had him in charge.

"Fancy Bill" is also to blame for adding so much romance so fact. He was late in communicating to the police here his peculiar theories; and by adding "a closed carriage drawn by two jaded horses" he put Lieutenant Crout upon the trail of the latter, while in reality there were no jaded horses nor closed carriage to find. Lieutenant Crout scoured the country around and around, finally realizing that the closed carriage was a myth and the two jaded horses a simple fancy of "Fancy Bill."

INTERVIEW WITH LIEUTENANT CROUT.

I met Lieutenant Crout this morning and had a talk with him. He is one of the most popular men on the force, and seems to have far more intelligence than the captain of the detectives.

"Did you see the communication in to-day's HERALD from Allentown?" I asked.

"No," he answered, "but I heard about it."

"What do you think of the closed carriage and jaded horses?"

"I don't believe they ever had an existence," he replied. "I could find no one who knew anything about them upon whose information I could at all rely."

"Did you hear about the child?"

"Yes," returned Lieutenant Crout, "I did. I heard that a man had been seen and with him a strange and apparently neglected child."

"Was the child taken to a barber shop?"

"Yes," was the response from the Lieutenant, "he was, and Fancy Bill cut his hair. Then Fancy Bill created the carriage and horses that I was sent out to find. Of course my trip was in vain; no such turnout had been seen anywhere around the neighborhood."

"You heard the child described?" said I.

"Yes, and the description appeared to tally with that of Charley Ross. But my clew was the horses and carriage. The clew was a false one. The man with the child could not be found, and so I returned home."

"Were there no means of finding out the direction the man with the little child took?"

"No; he was gone long before I arrived in Allentown, and no one had taken note of the direction of his departure."

"Do you think that the child the man had was the identical Charley Ross?"

"Well," added the Lieutenant, "I don't know—it may have been and it may not have been. I am sure the descriptions of the two were similar."

At the time of this interview Lieutenant Crout appeared to be in a great hurry, his business at the moment claiming his attention to other things. He moreover showed an unwillingness to answer any but general questions, so that I was forced to draw my conclusions more from his manner than his words. I am sure that Lieutenant Crout, like almost every one else, believes that the little child whose hair was cut in Allentown is the very little one in whose behalf the sympathies of the entire country are now aroused.

THE PAINFUL SUSPENSE

is telling very greatly upon Mr. Ross' health, and his friends state that he is not the same man. Every day seems to leave its mark on him, and lately he appears to be utterly bewildered. Mrs. Ross has more hope, though she is greatly distressed. She states that in case the boy is found he can easily be identified by asking him the simplest questions. He knows his own name, as well as the names of his brother and sister. He was such a quaint and old-fashioned little fellow that his parents used to call him William Penn.

THE DUTY OF THE PROVINCIAL POLICE.

The Philadelphia detectives under their manager have failed—utterly, hopelessly failed. Since the Allentown story appears, and is believed by every body to be the right one, it is the duty of the provincial police to take the matter up and find out the direction this party took after he turned his back upon Allentown. If this can be ascertained the rest is an easy matter, provided, of course, that the police elsewhere are of a different degree of common sense and intelligence than Captain Heins.

KILLED BY THE LOCOMOTIVE.

The South Side Railroad Company Severely Censured for Failing to Guard Against Accidents on Turnpike Crossings.

The inquest touching the circumstances which led to the death of Henry Heiman, from injuries received by his carriage being run into and smashed as he was driving across the track of the South Side Railroad Company, at Fresh Pond road and Metropolitan avenue, was concluded before Coroner Jones yesterday. The Coroner had a map made of the locality, showing the intersections of the roads and measurements. The engineer testified that he rung the bell and blew his whistle when within two or three hundred feet of the scene of the accident. The law requires that the whistle shall be blown when within a quarter of a mile of the crossing. He pointed out the place where he blew his whistle and it measured over 1,400 feet from the crossing, which was over a quarter of a mile. The jury, however, censured him and the company, as the following important verdict will show:—"We find that Henry Heiman came to his death by being run into by the South Side Railroad train on the night of the 14th of July, 1874, about twenty-five minutes past ten o'clock, at the crossing of the said railroad and North Second street and Middle Village Railroad, through the neglect and carelessness of the engineer, Thomas Cody, by not blowing the whistle and ringing the bell of the said locomotive, as the State law directs, at the proper distance from the crossing at Fresh Pond road and Metropolitan avenue, in the county of Queens; said engineer, Thomas Cody, acknowledges in his sworn statement that he did not blow the whistle nor ring the bell until within two or three hundred feet of the said crossing on the night of the accident; and we, the jury, do censure the said South Side Railroad Company, their agents and assignees for the gross carelessness in running trains over said road and crossing without having proper signals and guards at said crossing for the better protection of human life in the said county of Queens; and we further censure the North Second street and Middle Village Horse Railroad Company for not taking the necessary precautions for the protection of passengers over said turnpike and railroad, on Metropolitan avenue, by keeping and maintaining a flagman at said crossing and intersection of the South Side Railroad and Metropolitan avenue, in the county of Queens; and we (the jury) do most earnestly recommend to the proper authorities of the county of Queens to take such action as shall be the means of providing against such accidents hereafter on the crossing of said railroad."

The examination of the accused will take place before a justice in Queens county, and he will probably be held for the action of the Grand Jury.

KILLED BY A CROWD.

An Old Man Set Upon by a Party of Roughs in a Liquor Saloon.

Joseph Reid, a brassfounder, of First street, near Broadway, in Williamsburg, was killed last night in the barroom kept by H. L. Meyer, at No. 283 Pearl street. Michael H. Butler, of No. 307 Pearl, who was arrested by Officers Golden and Dunn, of the Second precinct police, is charged with the crime. According to the statement of Meyer, the proprietor of the place, to Captain Caffray, last night, Reid went into the saloon about four o'clock yesterday afternoon and commenced drinking. About seven o'clock Butler and a number of others entered and stood at the bar, talking and drinking likewise. No notice was taken of any of the parties until Butler and Reid took off their coats and engaged in a scuffle. The barkeeper went into the street to separate and restrain them. In consequence of the extent and violence of the crowd he could not approach the old man, and while the disturbance was in progress the officers rushed in. They immediately quelled it and arrested all the parties present. Reid had fallen, shortly after the general attack on him, in a corner, where he was found by Officer Golden, with his head resting on his chest. Assistance was promptly procured, all the prisoners were removed to the station house and afterwards the dead body of Reid. The police surgeon was at once sent for, but he could discover no outward marks of violence sufficient to cause death. It was supposed dissolution came suddenly from some organic disease. Dr. Shine was telegraphed for, and until his opinion is ascertained the real cause of the death cannot be known. Captain Caffray examined all the witnesses when they were brought to the station house, and the statements taken by him will be most advantageous to the Coroner in his inquiry.

SERIOUS ACCIDENT.

Yesterday morning, while engaged at work, Thomas Tidball, aged fifty-two years, stumbled in front of a planing machine in the moulding mill of Harned & Williams, Conselyea street, Brooklyn, and sustained such serious injuries that his life is despaired of. His arm was amputated at the Eastern District Hospital by Doctors Brady and Talcot.

A MIRACULOUS RESCUE.

Alderman O'Reilly, of the Twelfth ward of Brooklyn, while coming up on the half-past nine P. M. train yesterday, observed a Mrs. Williams fall on the track at Valley Stream, and, knowing that another train just due might crush her, seized her with his muscular arm and jumped with her across the track, just in time to clear the passing train, and saved her life at the risk of his own.

CHILD FRIGHTFULLY BURNED.

Susan Crawford, aged twelve years, was fearfully burned yesterday afternoon by the falling on her head of her mother's flat iron, at her residence, No. 567 Grand street. Dr. Hallam attended to the child, but pronounces the injuries fatal.

NEW CALIFORNIA CLIPPER SHIP—Our attention has been called to the beautiful new clipper ship Occidental, now loading for San Francisco at pier 11 East River, and from her fine model and general appearance she may fairly be expected to rival the best of those now afloat. She was built by Messrs E & A Sewall, of Bath, Me, who have of late years done as much to revive our wooden shipbuilding interest as any house in the country, having always one and sometimes two large ships under construction. The Occidental's dimensions are as follows:—Length, 210 feet; beam, 40 feet, and depth of hold, 24 feet 7 inches, and she registers 1,553 tons. She is constructed of the best material now in use, and has all the patent and modern improvements for vessels of her class, and rates 3 3 L1 at French Veritas for 10 years. She will doubtless prove a valuable acquisition to our depleted California tonnage. The O will sail in a short time for San Francisco.
